HOUSE VOTES CONFIDENCE IN CHAMP CLARK.

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 1.—The House of Representatives today unanimously passed a resolution expressing the confidence of that body, regardless of politics, in Speaker Champ Clark. The resolution is a direct rebuke to Colonel Bryan who, at the Baltimore convention, accused Clark of having solicited the aid of the big interests. The resolution reads:

"That this House, regardless of political belief or party alliance, has absolute confidence in the integrity and character of its Speaker, Champ Clark."

BAY STATE CITIZENS PROTEST WILSON

BALTIMORE, July 1.—Telegrams protesting against a nomination of Woodrow Wilson for President were received by Chairman Ollie James of the National Democratic Convention here today from Boston and Massachusetts leaders in political and civic affairs.

The messages were all severe in tone, indicating a widespread sentiment in opposition to a nomination of Wilson by thousands of people. The New Jersey Governor's attitude on the immigration question is roundly scored in the telegrams. Wilson is described as being too narrow ever to be elected President of the United States. The telegrams from Boston and Massachusetts follow:

Tells of Italian Protest.

I protest against the nomination of Woodrow Wilson for a candidate for President of the United States. I think he, less than any other, understands the great importance of the Latin element in future American life. The Italians of America do not wish that he have the votes of the majority of the Democrats and believe that another man should be chosen to run for the greatest office of the United States. F. M. ALGERI, Secretary of the Society Italo-American.

Cottage street, East Boston.

"Immigration Attitude Renders Him Unfit."

I wish to protest against the nomination of Woodrow Wilson for President by the Democratic party. His attitude on the immigration question renders him unfit for that great office. A. H. WOLFEIL

President William E. Russell Lodge, No. 222, Order Brith Abraham.

"Fights a People Who Have Done Much."

I strongly protest against the nomination of Wilson as Democratic candidate for President of the United States. Wilson fights the free immigration of Italians, of the people who have done so much for the progress of this young nation.

JOSEPH LANGONE,

President of Boston Italian Societies, No. 30 Prince street, Boston.

"Too Narrow-Minded for Office."

Woodrow Wilson should not receive the Democratic nomination for President. His nomination would prove an everlasting disgrace to the party. His attitude on conditions shows he is too narrow-minded for the office.

MOSES ALPER,

Vice-President Congregational Anshi Sparol.

Quincy Citizens' League Protests.

Woodrow Wilson's nomination would be an outrage in view of his well known attitude toward the millions of our citizens whose parents chanced to be born across the seas. The Quincy Citizens' League protests against his proposed nomination.

(Signed) JOHN C. FAIRCLOTH, President.

LEO P. NOONAN, Secretary.

WILLIAM KELLEY, Treasurer and Member of Democratic City Committee of Quincy.

"Would be a Danger to Liberty."

I am not interested in any political movement, but in this dangerous moment of the Democratic Convention I wish to join my voice against the election of Wilson, because he, as President of the United States, would be a factor for slavery and a great danger to the liberty of the people and to the continuous growth of the industries and commerce of this land. He is the enemy of Italian immigra-

WILLIAMS DENOUNCES W. J. BRYAN

CONVENTION HALL, Baltimore, July 1.—The Champ Clark leaders held a conference today previous to the opening of the convention. This was followed by a public meeting at which the Clark delegates crowded into a hall near the Emerson Hotel and listened to speeches by the Clark men.

The cause of both meetings was expressed by former Senator Dubois when he said:

"The Clark men will stick to the fight until he is nominated. We cannot lose."

Among those who took part in the conference were George Fred Williams of Massachusetts, ex-Governor David R. Francis of Missouri, ex-Senator Dubois of Idaho, ex-Governor McCorkle of West Virginia, Senator William J. Stone of Missouri and ex-Governor Dockery of Missouri.

Following the conference George Fred Williams heard a dell to Bryan in a speech to the delegates.

Following the mass meeting the delegates went to the convention hall in a body.

"First Kneel to Bryan."

"No man knows better than William Jennings Bryan," said Williams, "that the Democratic party has reached the progressive point and that a last we were promised a convention of progressive men. It is now turned into turmoil and by a man who owes Democracy more than any one man in the world. Democracy took him out of obscurity and placed him on high and in affluence.

"It is his purpose that no man shall be elected on the Democratic ticket unless he first kneel to William Jennings Bryan and bow to his dictation."

"I have been his slave for fifteen years," Williams went on. "The first time in years that I hold different views than his he turns upon me. By name he mentioned me, charging that I had gone over to the predatory interests of this country."

Foss Calls on Bryan.

A report gained circulation about the convention hall and the hotels that Foss had offered himself to Bryan as a compromise candidate. Governor Foss explained after leaving the Colonel that he had called to pay his respects to Mrs. Bryan and seemed surprised that the nature of his conference with the Colonel had become a subject of interest.

"Mrs. Bryan and Mrs. Foss met some time ago," said the Governor, "and I desired to see Mrs. Bryan and pay our respects to her. My visit was purely social."

3 HURT IN CAR CRASH IN BACK BAY

Three men were seriously injured and a number of men and women passengers were shaken up today when an inward bound, semi-convertible Chestnut Hill car struck a tip-cart owned by the city on Boylston street, opposite Hereford street.

The tip cart was driven by Joseph Collongo, thirty-seven, of No. 17 Stony Hill street. He received contusions of the back and shoulder. The other two injured men were at work on the new subway excavation.

STRIKE RIOTERS BATTLE IN LYNN

One man was injured and nine men were arrested in a fight today in front of J. J. Barnett & Son's morocco factory on Boston street, Lynn. Peter Pasteracke, chief engineer of the factory, was hit over the head with a piece of lead pipe and rendered unconscious. He was carried into the factory. A riot call was sent to the police station and a wagon load of policemen responded and cleared the streets.

Suspect Quarrelled With River Victim

Tragedy Reveals Romance of France

MRS. DELMAR, VICTIM IN HEADLESS BODY CASE

Henry Desiouvre Accused Woman in Headless Case of Theft of Money.

WOONSOCKET, R. I., July 1.—Police Chief Lowell J. Boston said today that he will ask for a warrant charging murder against Henry Desiouvre, the big Belgian now held on suspicion in connection with the headless woman mystery. He will be in court today or tomorrow.

The police assert that the body is that of Mrs. Angela Delmar, who was known here as Adele Fermantier and who lived with Desiouvre.

If this identification is correct—and the police are positive they are on the right track now—then an international romance lies back of the case, a romance ending in a quarrel and, according to the police, a swift murder and a cunning disposal of the body.

Mrs. Angela Delmar, to use the woman's right name, is or was the wife of Camille Delmar of Roubaix, France. She came to this country a year ago with Desiouvre.

Police Chief Boston said today: "The charge against Desiouvre will be changed to murder. We are now holding him on suspicion. We have enough evidence to charge him with a statutory offense. But without a statutory charge or a murder charge we can hold the man forty-eight hours on suspicion alone. So we do not have to bring him in court today unless we are ready to.

"We have arraignment in court for the court for the purpose of examining Desiouvre further today. We will confront him in the station house with witnesses in the hope that he may confess and tell us what has become of the woman's head and the knife with which the murder was committed.

Admits a Quarrel.

"Desiouvre admits that he changed his place of residence after the woman disappeared. He also admits that the clothing found in the river is hers. Likewise he admits having quarreled with her over the purchase of a sewing machine. He charges her with having stolen money from him.

"We believe that furnishes a motive for the crime.

"The stories that he has told neighbors —that the woman had gone back to France —coupled with their relations and other things, warrant us in holding him.

"As things look today I don't think there is any other man in the case. The story told by Joseph Knapotte of four men seen on the river bank led us to believe that other men were lumpliated. But we feel that the line of inquiry now conforms only Desiouvre."

Besides the headless body about which the mystery hangs, the police now have other important exhibits in the case.

Newport Stirred by Disappearance of Mrs. Curtis

NEWPORT, July 1.—Banking circles here were stirred today by a report that Mrs. Kitty Sisson Curtis, the twenty-year-old wife of Harry Curtis, teller in the Aquidneck National Bank, had disappeared from her home at No. 517 Broadway, this city. Before leaving, the wife, who was considered the prettiest blonde in the town of Portsmouth, her birthplace, is said to have penned this note to her husband:

"Dear Harry: I am leaving. Please get a divorce."

The couple were married two years ago. Their friends said they had never seen a happier couple. Apparently both were devoted to each other.

At the Aquidneck bank today it was reported that Curtis was off duty. He was finally located at his home. He admitted his wife had gone.

"She left me a note saying she had gone away for an indefinite stay," said Curtis. "I don't care to discuss the case further."

HOMES MENACED AT OLD ORCHARD

OLD ORCHARD, Me., July 1.—The first serious fire of the season in this section is burning close to 100 cottages in Ocean Park, which is part of this resort. Old Orchard proper is threatened. Two hundred have worked all night with shovels, buckets and brooms.

At 6:30 last night help was asked from Saco which sent fifty men. At 10 a. m. today Biddeford sent fifty men on the first appeal. This noon, when the flames were creeping close to the Queen Park cottages, a second appeal was sent to Biddeford which brought fifty more fire fighters. The second appeal to Fire Chief Charles H. Bonser of Biddeford was imperative: "For God's sake send more men." Biddeford responded without delay.

BALTIMORE, July 1.—The Democratic National Convention pushed along the balloting for a presidential candidate from the sound of the bell today. On the twenty-seventh ballot there was little change, but on the twenty-eighth Wilson gained twenty-nine votes in Indiana, the Hoosier delegates breaking away from Governor Marshall for the first time. On both ballots Champ Clark led, however, as he did on the 29th and 30th.

WILL BE NAMED FOR PRESIDENT, GOV. FOSS SAYS TODAY

BALTIMORE, July 1.—At noon today Governor Foss gave out this statement:

"I am perfectly satisfied with the situation as it stands. I am gaining strength, every moment and will be nominated. All this talk that the Foss boom was a stage is made by parties interested in other candidates.

Mayor Fitzgerald used tact and discretion, but in the hurly-burly of a convention already wrought up to a high tension point they would not have listened to anybody. National Committeeman Coughlin has been a tower of strength and has secured many opportunities that could not have otherwise been secured. The Massachusetts delegation is loyal and will stick. I have assurances that many states are favorable and will swing to me when convinced the convention is hopelessly deadlocked. I feel sure that I will carry back the nomination, and if nominated I will be elected. All that is needed now is patience until the break comes."

He left an estate of $45,000 to his wife.

Iowa, 26 Clark; Kansas, 20 Wilson; Kentucky, 25 Clark; Louisiana, 7 Clark, 1 Foss, 12 Wilson; Maine, 3 Clark, 2 Underwood, 9 Wilson; Maryland, 11½ Clark, 4 Wilson, 1 absent; Massachusetts, 29 Foss, 7 Wilson; Michigan, 18 Clark, 12 Wilson; Minnesota, 24 Wilson; Mississippi, 20 Underwood; Missouri, 36 Clark; Montana, 2 Clark, 6 Wilson; Nebraska, 3 Clark, 13 Wilson; Nevada, 6 Clark; New Hampshire, 3 Clark, 5 Wilson; New Jersey, 4 Clark, 24 Wilson; New Mexico, 8 Clark.

New Mexico challenged and roll call demanded and ordered. New Mexico's poll showed 5 for Clark, 3 for Wilson. Under the unit rule the chair gave all 8 for Clark.

New York, 90 Clark; North Carolina, 17½ Wilson, 6½ Underwood; Oklahoma, 10 Clark, 10 Wilson; North Dakota, 10 Wilson; Ohio, 19 Wilson, 29 Harmon; Oregon, 10 Wilson; Pennsylvania, 72 Wilson, 4 Clark, 2 gain of 1 for Wilson; Rhode Island, 10 Clark.

The convention began its tenth session at 11:03. After the meeting had been called to order by Chairman Ollie James, Rev. Carroll Hogue of the First M. E. Church, offered prayer. He prayed that the work of the convention might redound to the greater glory of God, and added:

"We ask Thee again, O God, that Thou wilt guide us in everything that is done this day. We pray that nothing may happen in this convention to mar its glorious record."

As the last echo of the prayer died there came a shout. The galleries had discovered an object upon which to bend the first applause of the day. All eyes went to the left aisle, down which came William J. Bryan, wearing a rose in his buttonhole, piloted by a couple of policemen and with his face set for a fight.

Chairman James made the following statement:

"The galleries have been thrown open to the general public. This is the sixth day of our meetings. We want to proceed with our business. I hope that the galleries will appreciate the courtesy. We do not want any applause that will disturb our business. The chair will not tolerate any demonstration that will interrupt business. If there is such I will be compelled to do something I don't wish to do, to clear the galleries."

Many Delegations Late.

It was noticeable, that the New York, Illinois, Texas, Tennessee and Alabama sections were empty long after the usual time for getting in the roll.

There was an early tip that Senator Gore was figuring large in an attempted ending of the deadlock. Delegates said they had seen a blind man often during the night as he was led to many places of much talk.

Theodore A. Bell of California came to the stand and said:

"I rise for the purpose of asking the unanimous consent of this convention that I may make a motion in favor of the extension of time for the railroad tickets held by members of this convention."

There was no objection and he moved that a committee of three be named to wait upon the validating agents of the railroads to get all statistics.

"All in favor of the motion say aye," said the chairman.

For once the convention rose as a unit and the motion was carried.

The committee named by the chair to see the railroad people was:

C. M. Denver of Ohio, Governor Emmett O'Neal of Alabama, Hoke Smith of Georgia.

Seven of the Massachusetts delegates broke from Governor Foss on the twenty-seventh ballot, the first of to-day's sessions. The vote was 29 Foss and 7 Wilson. John F. O'Brien of Cambridge, and John H. Chase of Springfield, who have persistently voted against the Governor, were joined by Charles B. Strecker, ex-Senator John F. Malley, Congressman John A. Thayer, Arthur Seagraves and Thomas Thacher.

Mayor Fitzgerald was in conference at the time the delegation was polled, and no amount of persuasion could alter the opinion of the dissenting seven. Before the next ballot a conference will be held, and unless some of the delegates alter their views the defection from Foss may be stronger.

During the progress of the twenty-seventh ballot, William J. Bryan was denounced on the floor as a political marplot, intending to effect a deadlock so that his own nomination might be assured.

The speaker was former Lieutenant-Governor John B. Stanchfield, the famous New York lawyer, who replied to Bryan's charge that New York's delegation by vote of was controlled by Charles F. Murphy."

He declared the charge false, and then cast his vote for Clark, as delegates has been supporting. The incident occurred during a poll of the New York vote, which showed some Wilson support, but which as usual was cast for Clark under the unit rule.

Calls Bryan a "Marplot."

A Michigan delegate wanted a time limit put on Stanchfield.

"I would say to the gentleman from Michigan," resumed Stanchfield, "that New York has a right to a hearing in this convention."

He told the Bryan folk that he had been a fighter with Bryan in the past. He said he ran for Governor in 1906 on the same ticket with William J. Bryan, and W. J. Bryan got then more votes by 100,000 than he ever got before or since.

Bisecting the New York delegation, he said that it contained the Governor and Lieutenant-Governor of the State, the last candidate for President and many distinguished men. These, he said, were the men Mr. Bryan had called men of wax. They had turned to Colonel Bryan and said: "We say to that favor-seeking, publicity seeking marplot from Nebraska—"

There was a roar of applause from the New York delegation, and continuing, Stanchfield said:

"He charges these men with being under the combination of Thomas F. Ryan, August Belmont and J. P. Morgan. I tell you that not one of these men is in any way under the influence of any of them.

"Of all the delegates on the floor, outside of the three men he has named, the richest and the most powerful is the gentleman from Nebraska."

He closed his address by saying that as to his personal record he was ready for Woodrow Wilson of New Jersey, Herman Ridder, the German editor, voted for Clark, and so did Corporation Counsel Watson. Senator O'Gorman came in during the roll and voted for Wilson. Under the unit rule the entire ninety votes were cast for Clark.

When the poll reached Kansas, on the twenty-ninth ballot, each excited delegate from the Kansas delegation demanded that the vote of that State be cast for Wilson. He said that two-thirds of the delegation had been instructed to cast its vote and that the chairman decided to obey the order. The delegates did not understand the ruling. Half of them stood on their chairs angrily shouting for a poll.

"Keep quit and you will get it," said the clerk.

Squabble Over Kansas.

Finally he got the delegation to a semblance of order and the calling of the State started. The vote stood thirteen to six in favor of Wilson. Chairman James was about to make his ruling when Theodore A. Bell of California arose excitedly to ask to speak and after a stormy time was finally J. W. Orr, of Atchison, Kansas said that a meeting of the Kansas delegation was held yesterday and that they had decided by two-thirds to cast the vote for Clark to Wilson and that they had agreed on subsequent ballots to fall in the majority rule. He contended that after the delegation had gone from Clark to Wilson by two-thirds the vote could not change in power that could make it go back to Clark.

The chair is ready to rule," said Chairman James. He reviewed the question under debate and ruled that the Kansas delegation could change its vote by two-thirds of the delegates present and voting. "The point of order is overruled and the twenty votes of Kansas are directed to be cast for Wilson," he added.

"The State of Kansas, Wilson, 20," ailed the clerk, and there was cheering.

Delegates to the Convention came from their beds wondering what sort of a dark horse had been tied outside the convention hall over night waiting for the inspection of the makers of presidential candidates. They faced a situation far more complex than had been found on any previous day, with much to befog the leading light and little to clarify of its details.

Facing the twenty-seventh ballot they saw no gress gains in any of the leading items of strength that had been in evidence when the convention dropped its pick and shovel to avoid a violent collision was the fourth commandment and the azure statutes of the Commonwealth of Maryland.

The pronunciamento from William J. Bryan, in which he turned the limelight upon five possibilities other than Woodrow Wilson, apparently left the New Jersey Governor and Champ Clark in the identical attitude of pedaling their own canoes without reference to what transpired in room 911 at the Belvedere Hotel, wherein Bryan court is held.

It left the convention with three forces, each having sufficient strength to deadlock the convention indefinitely. It left these three forces further apart than they had ever been with new coals added to the fire in each case.

Primarily, there was the New York delegation as the centre pin of the conservative forces. Mr. Bryan had run the New Yorkers into a pocket at the start of the voting. He had then cut off the communication between the progressive ranks and the conservative ranks by setting up a challenge for any man who dared seek coalition with the Murphy clan.

The Murphy votes, a total of ninety, tied with a nail ribbon that made the package insensitive and forceful, were angered by the Bryan coup. They declared that they would "accept nothing that bore the Bryan stamp."

About this nest-egg of conservatism there were banked such delegates as followed Harmon and Underwood flags—not all of them, to be sure, for many Progressives were in both camps, but the major part of the gas elements are markedly conservative. They claimed the balance of power and the ability to prevent any nomination that did not please them.

Next came the Clark forces with the insistence that they had the essential strength to hold the convention without result until it could either win or retire with credit and flying colors.

Alton B. Parker, temporary chairman of the convention, said today:

"I still believe that Clark will be nominated. The adjournment of the convention was to his advantage. There is no foundation for the statement that the New York delegation will swing to Gaynor, Underwood or another. I cannot conceive it possible that the delegation will swing to Wilson.

"We have voted for Clark for sixteen ballots. We will stay with him to the finish."

Charles F. Murphy issued the statement, "Those are my views," he said.

4 BOSTON LINES YIELD DEMANDS

Announcement was made today at the quarters of the Atlantic Coast Seamen's Union, the Marine Cooks and Stewards' Union and the Marine Firemen's and Oilers' Union that a settlement of the difficulties over the working conditions and wages of the members of those organizations have been made with four steamship lines in this city against whom a strike was ordered Saturday. At least 1,000 men benefit by the settlement.

Under the terms of the settlement the United Fruit Company, Commercial Tow Boat Company, Harper Tran portation Company and the Eastern Steamship Company agree to recognize the unions, which are subsidiaries branches of the National Transport Federation of America, and grant higher wages, better food and better sleeping quarters. The Eastern Steamship Company yielded to the men Saturday.

Negotiations are under way for a settlement of the strike with the Coastwise Transportation and the White Oak companies.

The crew, including seamen, firemen and oilers, of the Savannah line steamship Necoache, which arrived in port today, will leave the ship before Plans. They were ordered off by representatives of the Seamen's Union and the Firemen's Union. The men, all members of the latter organizations, will sign the payroll of the steamer before leaving.

NEW ENGLAND PROTESTS WILSON

tion, which brings here the best working class and simple and sincere people.

CAV. A. A. TOMASELLO,
President of Boston Italian Society.

"Prejudice Indicates Unfitness."

Woodrow Wilson is the least fitted by temperament of all the candidates for President before the convention. His prejudice against foreign-born Americans indicates his unfitness for the office. He should be eliminated from all further consideration.

HUMAN ZOLL,
Secretary, Congregation Anshei Pouedesi and Nchiha.

"Not the Stamp of Man for Office."

In behalf of our congregation, I wish to enter protest against the nomination of Woodrow Wilson for President. He is not the stamp of man to be elected to that exalted office. We are violently opposed to the nomination of a man who displays the prejudice against foreigners evinced by Wilson.

M. INGEL,
President Congregational Ahebei Israel.

"Too Narrow for Great Office."

The attitude of Woodrow Wilson on the immigration question makes it evident that he is too narrow for the great office of President. If the Democratic party nominates him to head the ticket, it will blast the hopes of Democracy. I wish to protest, in behalf of our organization, against his nomination.

JOSEPH BARRY,
Vice-President, Pride of Jacob Lodge, Independent Order Brith Abraham.

"Does Not Merit to Be President."

As an American citizen, as a president of the Italian society, the Fratellanze Siciliana, I wish to manifest my protest against the nomination of Woodrow Wilson. The southern European immigration has brought in America a great tribute of citizenship and immense contributions in any field of progress. The man who inconsiderately speaks against their immigration does not merit to be President of the United States, a nation of liberty.

P. AMARU,
No. 3 Prince street, Boston.

"Would Be Enemy of Progress."

As an Italian, as a future citizen of the United States, I wish to protest against the nomination of Woodrow Wilson as a candidate for President of this great nation for his contempt for our European immigrants. The man who does not recognize the importance of the work of our countrymen, and does not appreciate their many virtues, is unfitted for the Presidency, and would be, if elected, the worst enemy of the progress of this land of liberty.

E. LO-PRESTI,
Of "The Bollettino Della Sera."

T. R. BACKERS TELL MOTIVES

NEW YORK, July 1.—Here are the reasons why Amos Pinchot, Alexander Moore, Governor Osborn of Michigan, will support the Bull Moose party, as each explained them:

Amos R. E. Pinchot—I am in the new party because I believe that it is necessary in a republic to have a party which represents the people. No country can exist and prosper where government is controlled by a group of political bosses. The revolution against corrupt government is on, and it cannot be carried forward successfully within a party whose leaders are willing to resort to theft in order to secure the nomination of President.

Governor Charles S. Osborn of Michigan:

"I am for Roosevelt and his principles and the best practical means of perpetuating them."

Alexander P. Moore, editor of the Pittsburg Leader, and husband of Lillian Russell:

"I will take an active interest in the coming Roosevelt convention. I have not left the Republican party. The Republican party has left me. A man of iron nerve is needed to give the United States a constructive government, and Roosevelt is that man."

Former State Senator Everett Colby, Newark, N. J.:

"I cannot say what course the New Jersey Progressives will take, as no policy has as yet been determined upon. My own views are very clear, however. We should cut away absolutely from the Republican party and put independent Progressive candidates in the field in every State and locality in the land."

Alexander H. Revel of Chicago:

"I intend to do everything I can to assure success for the principle of Theodore Roosevelt and of the Colonel himself as the leader in the fight for these principles. There is no hope for such success without a new alignment."

Medill McCormick of the Chicago Tribune:

"Together with other Illinoians who refuse to regard the fraudulent renomination of President Taft by an illegal and unrepresentative convention as binding, I am doing what I can to organize the progressive voters of Illinois."

12 Are Imperilled by Firebug

Brave Rescues in North End

MARY PLAINEY, 6 YEARS OLD, RESCUED IN THE FIRE

Four persons were injured, women and children were carried down ladders by firemen and more than a dozen lives were imperilled by an incendiary fire in the three-and-a-half-story brick dwelling house at No. 205 Endicott street, North End, early today.

The blaze is attributed by the police to the mysterious firebug who has been at work in the North and West Ends for the past year and who has been responsible for at least a dozen fires, endangering the lives of hundreds.

John Buckley and Andrioli, both of Ladder No. 1, scorched their faces badly and received burns on the arms and neck while rescuing women and children.

Frank DiMarchi, who occupies the second floor with his wife and four children, fell down stairs, sustaining injuries to his back and sides, in attempting to escape from the building after helping the firemen to take out his family.

Mrs. Margaret Plainey, who occupies the top floor with her husband and four children, ranging in ages from nine years to six months, was carried down the ladder by Ladderman Patrick J. Buckley with her six-months-old child in her arms. The child's feet were scorched.

FEAR HUNDREDS DEAD IN TORNADO

WINNIPEG, Man., July 1.—A special train with doctors and nurses is being rushed to Regina, Sask., where the death list in the tornado, which swept over the city, is variously estimated at from 200 to 500. The property damage may reach $10,000,000.

The telephone office was wrecked and it is feared that the names of fifteen girls employed there will have to be added to the list of dead. The telephone exchange building, the Standard block, the First Baptist Church and the Baird and Bottle building are among the structures destroyed.

Before it struck the city the storm passed over the new provincial Parliament buildings south of Wascana Lake. Then its path was north over the Dominion Jail buildings, thence through the residential section on Sixteenth, Fifteenth, Fourteenth, Thirteenth and Victoria avenues.

On the latter are several public buildings and a number of churches. Next in order come Twelfth and Eleventh avenues and South Railway street, those covering the financial and business districts.

The blow was so sudden that at first great confusion reigned, but soon order was restored and relief gangs organized. The city power works went out of commission and left the city in darkness.

To guard against disorder the contingent of city troops at Sewell Military Camp, in Manitoba, was wired to return by special train.

Two fires started, but fortunately the brigade was able to get a stream of water playing, and the danger of a general conflagration was averted.

The hospitals are crowded with the injured and temporary hospitals are being set up.

The storm continued northwest from Regina through Central Saskatchewan, doing great damage, but no loss of life is reported outside of Regina. Heavy losses to buildings are reported from Qu'Appelle, forty miles east of Regina, and also at Melville, on the Grand Trunk Pacific.

Peril of Brain Surgery Ended by Chicago Doctor

CHICAGO, July 1.—Improving upon and developing surgical technic evolved by Dr. Allen B. Kanavel, a Chicago surgeon, Dr. L. L. McArthur, also a Chicagoan, has perfected a method of incision and operation in brain surgery which promises to mark the end of progressive blindness and simplify treatment of cranial tumors.

The discovery and Dr. McArthur's operations are given in the current issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association over his signature. The technic has particularly to do with a new mode of access to the pituitary body and its neighborhood.

Recent operations have been indifferently successful and those which were followed by recovery in most cases left patients abnormal and marked by knife wounds.

"Long considered safe from the most daring surgeon, both because of its almost inaccessible position and because of its intimate relation to life, the question of its feasibility to surgical attack has been answered in the affirmative," says Dr. McArthur. "The question has now changed to 'How and when shall one operate?'"

The incision for the operation as performed in clinic recently by Dr. McArthur is made in the roof of the mouth and instead of being an operation to make the most stout hearted surgeon hesitate is easily performed with a high average of success and comparative ease.

PARDON TO BE ASKED SOON FOR MRS. CUSUMANO

An attempt is to be made to secure a pardon for Mrs. Lena Cusumano, whom Governor Foss saved from death in the electric chair on conviction of the killing of her husband, just six hours before Frank Mascioli was put to death for the same crime.

Thomas J. Grady, Mrs. Cusumano's counsel, not content with saving her life, will ask Governor Foss to make her a free woman. Mrs. Vincenza Lasco, mother, and her two children will carry the glad tidings that Governor Foss will, within two months, be asked to grant a pardon.

Mr. Grady said: "I am fully convinced that Mrs. Cusumano is not guilty of the crime of murder, and in that belief I shall not give up the fight to make Mrs. Cusumano a free woman."

Bedient of Red Sox Steals Away to Wed

Hugh Bedient, the Red Sox pitcher, is on his honeymoon today, and the reason he asked Manager Stahl for a few days' vacation is out. His teammates were kept completely in the dark.

Bedient's bride was Miss Imogene P. Palmer of Buffalo. When Bedient was with the Providence team of the then Eastern League his teammates and the fast young Bisons used to try to find out who the girl was who always accepted a box seat when Bedient pitched. They never found out, but it was Miss Palmer, Miss Palmer came here from Buffalo. She took a taxi-cab and was driven to St. Mark's Methodist Episcopal Church, in Brookline. Somewhere on the way she was joined by Bedient.

King of Bavaria's Grandson a Pauper

NEW YORK, July 1.—"Truth lies in the Bible word visiting the iniquities of the fathers upon the children, even to the third and fourth generation."

Thus spoke Count Carl E. von Hocksteden-Hochstedt, grandson of Ludwig I., King of Bavaria, now a poverty stricken old man dependent on the charity of his landlady here, after narrating the marvelous story of his life.

His story dealt with the tangled web of intrigue, romance, revolution and misfortune that dragged Lola Montez, the Spanish dancer, from King Ludwig's side and left Ludwig without a crown.

Count Hocksteat is the son of Countess Diane Marie Hocksteaten-Hochstedt, herself a daughter of the mad King, who filled no mean place in the revelries that caused the downfall of her father and her own exile.

Von Hochstedt for nearly twenty years has been living in obscurity. He has lived for some years in a small furnished room in an old fashioned frame house at No. 73 East 126th street owned by Mrs. Bloomingdale.

MILWAUKEE LADS AND LASSIES DEFEAT THE ANTI-KISS CAMPAIGN

MILWAUKEE, Wis., July 1.—The Milwaukee Medical Association, which recently adopted a resolution to inaugurate a movement to make the exchange of kisses a crime, has lost its fight before the real battle of kisses began.

"Laughed to death" promises today to be the diagnosis of the physicians of the malady which caused the unseemly demise of their campaign against the bacillus osculatorious.

"PLEASE REMIT," THE BALTIMORE MESSAGE

BALTIMORE, July 1.—Six days of convention have just about exhausted the holiday spirit of the occasion, and today a general exodus of convention visitors, routes, marching clubs and even delegates took place. The enthusiastic visitors who last Tuesday were having a "perfectly lovely" time disbursing their spending money and talking politics settled down apathetically to the routine of the deadlock or hurried homeward with depleted purses. Telegraph officers were in great demand. Many of the messages were of the same general trend. They were addressed to wives and mothers and brothers and friends, and each concluded, "Don't forget to remit."

HOLLISTON NURSERY BURNED TO GROUND

The entire plant of the Eastern Nurseries at Hollision, including two greenhouses, a house and barn, was burned to the ground, causing a loss estimated at between $3,000 and $10,000, partially covered by insurance. Two horses in the barn were burned to death, and two were saved.

JOHN D. CHARTERS A FERRY BOAT TO ELUDE REPORTERS

TARRYTOWN, N. Y., July 1.—John D. Rockefeller's latest ruse to elude reporters was to charter a ferryboat. He reached Nyack in his automobile only to learn that ferries were tied up for the night. Knowing Captain John Lyon of the Rockland, Mr. Rockefeller ordered his chauffeur to drive to the captain's house.

"Hello, Captain Lyon," called Mr. Rockefeller. "I want to get over to my home at Pocantico, and I would like to charter your boat for a trip. I'll make the fee right."

Captain Lyon replied that he would be glad to accommodate Mr. Rockefeller if he could get the crew together. Captain Lyon climbed into the car alongside of Mr. Rockefeller and together they mustered the crew and the Rockland made the trip with Mr. Rockefeller the only passenger.

HEART AND LIVER ON THE WRONG SIDE

PARIS, July 1.—A curious discovery has just been made on board the French cruiser Patrie. A young stoker, Albert Cassan, aged twenty three, came to the doctor and told him that he suffered from palpitation of the heart. Quite naturally the man accompanied his words with a gesture, but, to the doctors' great astonishment, it was to his right side that he pressed his hand. "But your heart is in your left side," he protested. Cassan, however, insisted that his heart was on the right side. It was found that the man's whole system, heart, liver, stomach and spleen, were reversed.

3 NEW LAWS IN EFFECT TODAY

Two new laws, the more important of which is the Workingmen's Compensation Act, went into effect today in Massachusetts. The other law is also important, requiring that none but enrolled voters of the party represented by a candidate shall be entitled to sign the nomination papers of that candidate.

A third important measure became operative today. This is an order of the State Board of Railroad Commissioners requiring fifty per cent. of all street railway cars in the Commonwealth to be equipped with lifting jacks.

Immediately after the Workingmen's Compensation Act became effective, the first case of an accident to an employe was submitted to the recently created Industrial Accident Board, appointed by the Governor to carry out the provisions of the new law. Under the law employers must send the board reports of all injuries to their employes.

First Accident Reported.

The report in the first accident since the law went into effect follows:

The Industrial Accident Board.

Gentlemen: We beg to inform you that a man in our employ, twenty years of age, was injured at 2:30 this morning on a plane. Kindly acknowledge receipt of same and inform us if you should have received the report.

(Signed)

B. D. PERKINS MACHINE COMPANY.

Warren, Mass.

The law under which the report was made is considered the most complete and satisfactory ever drawn in this country. It has been approved by the Supreme Court as constitutional. The measure is lengthy, and for many not easy to understand. The result of this was seen today as hundreds of requests were made to the accident board today for copies of the law and explanations of its features.

In brief, the new compensation law relieves the employe, who elects to sue under it from several of the limitations imposed upon him by the common law. The doctrine of master and servant, contributory negligence and fellow-workman are eliminated to a large extent by the law and the method of recovery of damages is simplified and made to conform closer to the demands of common sense and justice.

Schedule for Accidents.

If an employe is partly incapacitated in an accident while at work, under the law he is allowed half his regular earnings for a maximum of 300 weeks. If he is totally disabled for work by the accident, he is given half pay for a period of 500 weeks.

If the employe loses both hands, or both feet, or 10 per cent. of sight of both eyes, he is allowed anywhere from $4 to $10 a week for a period of 100 weeks. A regular schedule for accidents has been established. The law covers all cases where accidents occur to wage-earners of both sexes while at work for their employers, with the exception of domestic servants and farm laborers.

The law also looks out for the employers in the State, giving them a definite and set standard of liabilities to be paid in case of accident to their workmen. It does away with cost of litigation, furnishes them with a legal and effective co-operative association, controlled by themselves with which they can minimize the cost of carrying accident insurance, industrially. This association is established as the Massachusetts Employers' Insurance Association. It is made up of employers joined together for the purpose of mutual insurance against losses arising from injuries to employes. The employers are given absolute freedom from the annoyance of petty law suits.

The new industrial accident board is made up of James B. Carroll of Springfield, chairman; Dudley M. Holman of Taunton, secretary to Governor Foss; David T. Dickinson of Cambridge, Edward F. McSweeney of Boston and Representative Joseph A. Parks of Fall River.

Send Veteran Model Home to France

Romances of Boston Studios—No. 2

Girls of the Studios Aid Old Friend

JEAN ROUZAUT, AND GIRL MODELS WHO ARE SENDING HIM BACK TO HIS HOME

MISS JEAN M. CLARE.

MISS LILLIAN GARDENER.

Girl and women models in the artists' studios of the Back Bay are raising a fund to send Jean M. Rouzaut, the veteran of their posing craft, back to his beloved France, where a pension awaits him.

Most grateful is Rouzaut to his friends. She are doing this for him.

"My life is theirs from now on," he says in his slow, courteous way.

Among the girl models who are assisting Rouzaut to get back to France for his pension are Miss Lillian Gardener and Miss Jean M. Clare of the Fenway studios.

Rouzaut lives at No. 290 Columbus avenue. He has posed as "Father Neptune," as a model for "Christ in the Last Supper," and for the famous pale-antidio and was immediately accepted.

ing "Politics," which has been exhibited widely. Posing with him for "Politics," was Captain Fish of Melrose, another veteran, who was killed by a steam-roller shortly after the painting was completed.

Of his life and of his gratitude to his friends now, Mr. Rouzaut is himself the best narrator. Here is his life story:

"Today I am the happiest man in the world. I have struggled hard during my life, but everybody is so good to me now, that I can never forget what they have done.

"When I was fifteen years old, I joined the French navy and served five years. After that I went to sea as cook in a sailing vessel. After sailing around the world I landed in Liverpool, England, and obtained a position as chef in a hotel.

"While there I met a little Irish girl, Mary Finigan. She was as sweet as you ever saw. I fell in love with her and we became engaged.

"Just about that time the Franco-Prussian War broke out, and I felt it my duty to return to France. I told her, and she said she would wait for me. I joined the cavalry, and for eleven months I trailed the border, with here a skirmish and there a battle.

"When the war closed I returned to England, and found Mary waiting for me. We were married and lived in England for fifteen years. We came to New York and later to Boston.

"In New York and Boston, I worked as chef in many of the hotels, but I began to grow old. My fingers were not so nimble, my step not so quick. I was forced to quit. For a time I had nothing to do, until a friend of mine advised posing. I visited one of the artists in the Fenway

MEISTERSINGERS IN DRESS REHEARSAL

B. F. Keith demonstrated at a private dress rehearsal last evening to about 1,500 guests at his theatre that he has secured another big vaudeville hit for the Summer in his new production of "The Meistersingers in Camp." The Meistersingers made their first appearance last Summer at the same theatre, but their production this season is far superior to their initial production. Artistically it is one of the best vaudeville features ever seen in the modern form of variety entertainment. The Meistersingers are the members of the Harvard, Schubert and Weber Quartettes. These quartettes are also known as the Aleppo Temple Choir and Mystic shriners all over the country know of the excellence of their voices.

NEWPORT JEHUS SEND APPEAL TO DIPLOMAT

NEWPORT, July 1.—James Boyle, diplomat and president of the Cabmen's Union, is preparing a letter to the Russian Ambassador and his American wife, Madame Bakhmeteff, who are coming from Washington next week for the Summer, asking them to rescind the order which prevents cabmen from standing in front of the James Gordon Bennett villa, which the Embassy has rented, and directly in front of the Casino, the gold mine for the cabbies.

STILL CONTEST BEGINS TODAY

Of course, to New Yorkers, there is no place like New York.

But that isn't any reason why they should continually deprecate the value and importance of everything and everybody outside the "sacred" precincts of Manhattan.

If Boston's women dress like "frumps" it is an opinion which is apparently confined to the big city.

The AMERICAN agrees with Miss Laura Lee, the noted Boston artist and painter, that "Boston is the most truly fashionable city in the country."

To prove conclusively to unenlightened New York—and any other scoffers—that what Miss Lee says is true, the AMERICAN will have its photographers stationed all day today, Tuesday and Wednesday, at the corners of Boylston and Tremont, Boylston and Washington, Washington and Summer and Winter and Tremont. Their truthful cameras will settle the question in a manner beyond dispute. The photographers will snap the busy shoppers, all unconscious, and the AMERICAN will publish their pictures. The first picture will be in Tuesday evening's AMERICAN and one each day during the week, and then—a whole page of them next Sunday.

Any woman who recognizes her own picture and brings it into the Boston AMERICAN office, dressed as she was when the picture was snapped and can prove conclusively that the picture is of her, will get a prize of $5.

Just think—no trouble at all, only to come to the office. The AMERICAN photographers are all experts on style. They know at first glance a well-dressed woman when they see her. Their work has trained them for that. So, if you are in doubt as to whether you are modishly dressed or not (some women are so modest) the snap-shot artist will tell you. If your picture appears in the paper, then you know you're all right.

The seal of approval has been set upon you—and you get five dollars besides. So watch the papers, and if your picture appears among the best-dressed women of Boston, don't be cast-down when the picture was taken, come to the office and get your five dollars. It's a sure case of something for nothing—and think of all the nice things five dollars will buy.

CONGRESS EXTENDS APPROPRIATIONS FOR THIRTY DAYS

WASHINGTON, July 1.—The House today passed the joint resolution of Representative Fitzgerald extending the time of all appropriations for the fiscal year 1912 one month beyond June 30. This was the first time since 1904 that the House has been required to pass an emergency resolution, because funds for the coming year were not ready when the current appropriation ran out. The joint resolution was passed by the Senate at 12:31 o'clock.

This affects thousands of government employes, including 2,000 civilians employed at the Charlestown Navy Yard, and means they will get their pay for another month at least.

MISS HAZARD ELOPES, ELUDING MOTHER

LONDON, July 1.—Although balked twice by his prospective mother-in-law, Fred Bogert, the American vaudeville performer, succeeded today in marrying Grace Hazard, the diminutive American vaudeville star.

The marriage took place by special license here, and the bride received the parental forgiveness and blessing. Dupree is known on the stage as "The man with the cigar." Miss Hazard is known as "Five feet of comic opera," since her appearance in a vaudeville novelty with that title in which she made a success.

CAMBRIDGE FIRE DEPARTMENT SHIFTS

Three transfers were made in the Cambridge fire department today as a result of changes made by Chief Nathaniel W. Hunker. Captain Cutler Voss of Chemical 2 was sent to Engine 4 to take the place of Captain Denson, who recently resigned. Captain John Shea of Engine 8 was transferred to Chemical 2 to take Voss' place. Lieutenant "Ted" Curran was promoted to take Captain Shea's place at Engine 8, Cambridge.

LYNN APPOINTS A NEW CITY ENGINEER

William L. Vennard, a draughtsman for twenty-two years in the city's engineer's office, Lynn, was today appointed city engineer by Mayor Connery to succeed George J. Leland, who died last month. Vennard is thirty-nine years old.

CHILD MAIMED BY STOKES CAR

NEW YORK, July 1.—W. E. D. Stokes, former proprietor of the Hotel Ansonia, and recently the victim of a shooting by Lillian Graham and Ethel Conrad, was riding at a rapid rate down Broadway yesterday afternoon in his big touring car, when a middle-aged woman and a group of four children attempted to cross eastward at Sixty-sixth street.

They had just stepped beyond the western car track when they saw the fast approaching automobile. They were confused for a moment; then each of them—a pretty little girl of fifteen—realized the danger, and with a quick thrust shoved back the others. They were her mother, two younger sisters and her small brother.

She saved them, but was unable to save herself. Wellington Cobbs, Stokes' chauffeur, tried at the last moment to brake his car and to swerve it aside. But he had been going too fast, and the left forward mudguard struck the girl and hurled her fifteen feet.

FEAR LIBERTY BELL MAY BREAK APART

PHILADELPHIA, July 1.—Wilfred Jordan, the curator of the Independence Hall Museum, is authority for the statement that the Liberty Bell ought not to be removed from its resting place again, as the old crack has extended for more than six inches in the past few weeks and the rift shows signs of disintegration that may cause it to fall apart.

PRINCE BISMARCK LIKED "HIGH" FOOD

LONDON, July 1.—Some personal reminiscences of Bismarck from the pen of the late Henry Labouchere appear in Truth. Mr. Labouchere states he once saw the great German Chancellor eat a fish "that smelled so high that it almost made everyone in the room sick."

FEAR NIAGARA SUICIDE.

NIAGARA FALLS, N. Y., July 1.—The finding on Luna Island of a woman's hat and coat, from which all identifying marks had been removed, points to another Falls suicide.

CLICQUOT Club Ginger Ale is always deliciously appetizing and refreshing. The Crystal purity of the water and the prime quality of the sugar, ginger and extracts of limes and lemons used insure this. For picnics, or other similar occasions, its equal cannot be found.

Clicquot Club GINGER ALE

Clicquot Club Ginger Ale appeals to men, women and children. Its mildness of zest makes it a delight to ladies and little folks who do not ordinarily like ginger ale because of its harsh, throat-burning quality. It is cooling, refreshing, satisfying—an ideal drink for summer. It goes well with crackers or sandwiches — or alone. Although reasonable in price, it is unsurpassable in purity, wholesomeness and fine quality. It is served in the best families everywhere.

TWO LARGE GLASSES IN EVERY BOTTLE

OTHER CLICQUOT CLUB BEVERAGES:

Sarsaparilla Birch Beer Root Beer

Lemon Sour Orange Phosphate

At the better class grocers by the case, dozen or bottle at a price which amounts to about 5c per glassful.

UNFAIR TO THAW, SAYS ATTORNEY

WHITE PLAINS, July 1.—Clarence J. Shearn, counsel for Harry K. Thaw, telegraphed yesterday a protest against Mr. Jerome's conduct of the case for the State in the hearing in progress in White Plains to Attorney-General Carmody, who has retained Mr. Jerome as special counsel. Mr. Shearn says the fee for the service is $10,000, which ought to pay for a free and fair inquiry, instead of a "venomous and bitter" one.

"Two weeks have passed," the telegram says, "and not one witness has been called by Mr. Jerome to testify to Thaw's conduct and demeanor during the past six years. Mr. Jerome has announced he does not intend to call the State officials who have observed and examined Thaw during the past year, but he proposes to use the same group of alienists who have conspired against Thaw ever since his first trial for homicide, men who, if entirely disinterested, have become set and fixed in a point of view from which it would be obviously difficult to swerve them with any amount of new evidence.

"I ask you to note the character of the witnesses thus far called by Mr. Jerome in the name of the State:

"1. A woman committed for perjury by Supreme Court Justice Fitzgerald in 1908, and turned loose by Mr. Jerome while District Attorney, immediately after testifying against Harry Thaw in 1909;

"2. An alienist who, after admitting the receipt from Mrs. William Thaw of several thousand dollars, and having unsuccessfully brought suit for several thousand more, now runs up in Mr. Jerome's camp to help keep Mrs. Thaw's son in Matteawan;

"3. A lawyer who only missed disbarment by a vote of three to two in the Appellate Division, and against whom disbarment charges are now pending;

"4. A man who on the stand admitted that he had just come out of Sing Sing after serving four months for perjury; and

"5. Thaw's wife, whose ruin by Stanford White provoked the homicide for which, although acquitted, Thaw is still in prison."

Mr. Shearn says the immediate cause of his protest is a piece of bad faith and sharp practice by Mr. Jerome Saturday in connection with letters said to have been written by Dr. Austin Flint on the case. Mr. Jerome had testified that he was unable to find these letters, but that Mr. Shearn might come to his office at any time Saturday and look through the papers for them. Mr. Shearn came to the city specially for this purpose and notified Mr. Jerome's office by telephone he would be there in ten minutes. A minute later the Jerome office telephoned that Mr. Jerome was leaving for the day and that the papers could not be examined until after today's session of the court.

Pope Pius Cheered by Visits of His Three Sisters They Are Constantly in Touch With the Vatican

THREE SISTERS OF THE POPE AND HIS NIECE GILDA (STANDING UP)

Photograph by Underwood & Underwood.

With His Niece, Gilda, They Superintend His Household Arrangements.

ROME, July 1.—The three sisters of the Pope—Rosa, Anna and Maria Sarto, spinsters all—are the most touching figures to be seen in the Vatican gatherings about Pope Pius X. During the last few years, since he has been enfeebled by illness and subject to frequent attacks of faintness and dizziness, they are almost constantly with or near their brother.

Either by telephone or by personal calls, they get in touch with the Pope daily. To them he is "Beppi," and to their tender solicitude as much as to his daily life is due the robust constitution which has enabled him to defy the attacks of sickness for so long.

With the three in their care of the Pontiff is associated the Pope's niece, Gilda. They superintend the household arrangements at the Vatican and watch especially the cooking arrangement.

Food Too Rich.

A few months ago the Pontiff protested at the meals that were being served him. His stomach, he declared, was worn out with the rich food stuffs that made up the Vatican menu. To this diet he ascribed his recurring attacks of catarrh and the gout which made his life miserable.

Previously, his sister Maria had personally superintended the cooking arrangements. The Vatican diplomacy forced her to give up this practice. But the Pope's health became the most important consideration at the Palace and at last the Pontiff himself remembered a certain cook, Stefano, whose meals had pleased him.

Stefano presented himself at the home of the sisters. They told him of the Pontiff's troubles in the culinary line. They told him how the Pope longed for the simple Venetian dishes. Stefano set to work and prepared in skeleton a complete menu for a whole year, and the sisters sent him, with this menu, to the Papal Palace.

Stefano's Duties.

The papal secretary of state, Cardinal Merry del Val, personally engaged Stefano. The man's duties are to select every bit of food that goes on the Pope's table, and to see that only the best and simplest things are served.

Stefano goes constantly to the sisters for advice, and relies upon their wisdom for guidance, constantly. Thus, though barred from actual supervision within the Vatican itself, they are able, by means of their intimacy with Stefano, to keep constantly in touch with the Palace domestic arrangements.

In the same way, though barred by ceremony from many functions, they are able by means of telephone messages to keep in touch.

URGE CHANGE IN BRITISH JUDAISM

LONDON, July 1.—Two divisions in connection with the election of a Chief Rabbi of British Judaism have led to a suggestion that there should not be an election to the office at this juncture, but that the functions should be divided, and that they should be vested in a board of distinguished divines acceptable to all sections of the community.

RED SOX WILL BE GUESTS AT KEITH'S

All the members of the Red Sox team will attend the performance at B. F. Keith's Theatre tonight as the guests of the management to witness the opening of the Meistersingers in Camp. When the Red Sox Quartet was formed last season it was discovered that nearly all of the players were lovers of good music. Larry Gardner is a real high brow on music and also Hugh Bradley. Bradley was making arrangements to bring some of his chums to hear the Meistersingers and the management of the theatre thereupon extended an invitation to the entire team which was accepted.

"FIRED" PASTOR "GOT IN WRONG"

SACO, Me., July 1.—"I got in wrong! That's the whole trouble. I came here as minister of the church and gave them good service, but because I was a practical Christian and because I found in Socialism the closest possible approach to practical Christian doctrines, and said so—they've kicked me out."

Thus the Rev. Ipsl Harris Drake, former pastor of the Universalist Church of Beverly and for the last year head of the Second Parish Unitarian Church here, described today the differences within the church which rounded Saturday, in his discharge from the pastorate by a vote of the parish meeting.

Mr. Drake left the church at Beverly because he had to bolster its starved pay on $1,000 a year here. One baby came and I he and his wife got along.' But when the second little girl arrived, the dollars and cents could not be stretched far enough.

One-Man Church.

"It was a poor parish, made up of poor people," said Mr. Drake today. "They couldn't afford to pay more, so I left."

He went on to tell of the trouble at Saco.

"It's a one man church here," he said. "I'm glad to say—since conditions are as they are. It may be difficult to get another parish, but be sure if I do it will be with the understanding that I am a Socialist and shall promulgate the Socialist doctrines.

"I came here the first of last September, at a salary of $1,200 a year, with a parsonage and by bringing it to pretty close to $2,000.

"Last January conditions among the 11,000 mill workers here forced themselves on my notice. It has been said that conditions here could be duplicated even among the slums in New York. I studied things as I found them, and urged some relief.

"The Socialist doctrines offered the best possible solution. I became a Socialist, joining the Portland local in January. Afterwards I lectured there and here, urging reforms.

Ridiculed by Editor.

"I became involved in a controversy with Editor Morrwood of the Biddeford Journal. I asserted that unless the terrible inequalities of the present day were abolished, the time would come when American patriotism would reassert itself and there would come an economic revolution brought by force of arms, but none the less inevitable and truly a revolution.

"Editor Morrwood ridiculed me. He ridiculed what he called my 'rash talk' and advised me to allow the 'bird of peace to light upon my brow.' He had as much gall as his name implies.

"I replied. He returned the manuscript, saying, that he could not publish it because he 'did not wish to devote his columns to Socialist propaganda.'

"The rest people were, I had him by the wool and the knew it.

"But a parish meeting was called. They asked me in the interests of the parish to cease my agitation. I agreed to do so.

"For three months I kept silent. Then my conscience would not be stilled, and the crying injustice all about me demanded that I preach the real Christianity and not just mouth talk.

Vote to Dismiss Pastor.

"I called together the leaders of the parish and told them my determination. Last week the meeting was called to consider the question whether I should continue to hold the pulpit.

"I had lots of friends in the meeting. In fact the numerical authority of the parish is with me. But in this church eight or ten men contribute practically all the finances. They threatened to withdraw support unless I was ousted.

"My friends were forced to vote for my dismissal.

"But I'm not worried. My wife is a brave woman and a real christian. I have worked for my living before and can do so again. Certainly I shan't be drawn into such a situation as this in another case."

Pastor Says Women's Styles Spoil Walking

"Hobble skirts, narrow-toed shoes and other twentieth century notions for female adornment have driven the great exercise of walking from among the accomplishments of the women of today," the Rev. Alton A. Stockday of the Union Congregational Church declares.

"We have been prone to laugh at people for their habit of binding up the feet to keep them small," he continued. "We should pause in our enjoyment long enough to look at what Americans are now inconsiderately doing to their feet in. I have seen women on the streets of Boston who may have been perfectly at ease as they walked along, but their attempts to walk certainly hurt me.

"Walking is the greatest of out-of-door enjoyments, yet many people cannot remember anything of note regarding a long walk. All they can tell you is how tired they were.

He announced that a provincial organization will be perfected in New York State at once and will be followed later by a permanent organization, which will extend to every county in the State. His statement, in part is as follows:

"A new party is a necessity because so many have come to realize the hopelessness of truly efficient and upright government through the agency of either of the old parties unless they could be effectually divorced from the sinister control of those who believe that "the power to take" is a fitting rule of life. There must be no mistaking the gravity or immensity of this task, but it will appeal to those who believe in the moral glory of American democracy.

Let the men who have this faith undertake the labor. That labor involves the contest of every place to be voted for by the people at the coming election from President, Congressmen, Senators and Assemblymen to the lowest office upon the list. The principles we represent are as necessary to the effective betterment of State and local affairs as they are essential to the perpetuation of the national government.

COSTLY ROUTES OF STEAMSHIPS

HAVRE, July 1.—Though at tremendous expense, all the transatlantic steamship routes are taking precautions to avoid a repetition of the Titanic disaster. To follow the new southern route, as laid out by the Atlantic conference of steamship lines, is alone an item of big expense. It is estimated that the extended route will cost the passenger companies from quarter of a million to $400,000 this season alone. In addition, there is the expense of extra men, life boats, one or two additional wireless operators and so on. To regain the confidence of the traveling public the steamer lines are incurring expense and observing precautions that tell heavily on the balance sheet.

Right after the Titanic disaster the Atlantic conference of steamship lines laid out the new southern course to Europe which must be followed by all steamers. The new course is 200 miles longer than the former southern route. And the latter is 180 miles longer than the ordinary route which is followed when there is no danger of ice.

New York is on the fortieth parallel of latitude and Boston is on the forty-first. Liverpool is in latitude 53. The natural course, therefore, across the ocean would be northeast.

Big Coal and Food Bill.

Now all steamers leaving American ports at this season are sailing southeast, heading straight for the Azores. Instead of crossing direct, they describe a great arc, crossing the ice track as far South as latitude 37.50.

How does this slight difference cost so much extra in so many miles. The landsman might ask.

The answer is: Coal and food.

To steam 200 miles requires from eight to fifteen hours. This means that the passengers have to be fed at least two extra meals and the furnaces must be fed hundreds of more tons of coal.

The Mauretania, for example, burns nearly 500 tons of coal per day. This coal costs the Cunard line between two and three dollars a ton. In eight additional hours the Mauretania would burn 200 tons more coal. This would make the voyage $300 more expensive for coal alone.

Take the item of extra meals for a longer route.

Suppose the Mauretania is carrying 1,500 passengers—she frequently carries 2,500. The meals cost the company an average of 40 cents apiece. Two extra meals for 1,500 passengers is 3,000 meals. At 40 cents each this costs the company $1,200. And the more passengers the more the extra expense.

How Figures Grow.

It is easy to calculate, then, that one eastward trip of the Mauretania with 1,500 passengers under the new Southern route costs the Cunard Company $500 more for coal and $1,200 more for meals, or a total of $1,700 extra for which there is no return under the present schedule of passenger tariffs.

There are approximately 200 crossings of the Atlantic per month in the important passenger lanes. The total extra cost by the new route, to say nothing of extra help, is immense. Figured at four per cent. interest it would pay the dividends on an enormous amount.

The iceberg season lasts from April to July. If the long route is followed next season the additional expense to the companies will be all the more. And the companies see no other prospect now.

FRENCH CONSUL IN SANTIAGO ACCUSED BY CAPTURED REBEL

SANTIAGO, Cuba, July 1.—A sensational declaration involving the French Consul at Santiago was made today by a negro insurgent of General Ivonet's command, who was captured by federals and brought to this city.

Ordinarily rebel prisoners are summarily executed, but the prisoner in question had been acting as personal messenger for Ivonet, and his life was spared in consideration that he reveal secrets of value to the government. The negro said that he had carried $600 from Ivonet to the French Consul, for the latter to transfer to Mrs. Ivonet, wife of the rebel chief. The French Consul has already been accused in the Havana press of complicity with the rebels.

Drexel Will Not Be a Pet of Society

NEWPORT, R. I., July 1.—John R. Drexel, Jr., is determined that he shall not be numbered among the idle rich. Young Drexel, who came of age last year, will go to Texas to engage in the lumber business.

Grandson of Anthony J. Drexel, the Philadelphia banker, who founded the family's great fortune, young Drexel was "born with a gold spoon in his mouth." He is disposed to be satisfied with a pewter spoon until he earns a gold one by his own hard work.

Related by blood or marriage to all the Drexels, the Biddles, the Trotts, the Pauls and the Fells, he declares he is capable of roughing it in Texas with the roughest of them.

John R. Drexel, Jr., is a great favorite in the society here, of which his mother is a leader.

COMMERCE MEN PROPOSE LAW TO AVERT STRIKES

The directors of the Boston Chamber of Commerce have approved of a State law, suggested by its Committee on Industrial Relations, by which, it is believed, such strikes as the strike on the Boston Elevated, would be averted.

The proposed legislation would provide for a special investigating board in every case of an industrial dispute which affects the public interest.

In cases affecting public utilities, it is recommended that the board be given power to compel the production of all books and papers, and that strikes and lockouts be prohibited pending investigation.

Where the dispute is concerned only with a private business, the prohibition of lockouts and strikes pending investigation and the compulsory production of books and papers are not recommended, because it is feared that such a law could not be passed nor enforced on account of the protests of organised labor against interference with their rights in the one case, and of the employers against intrusions into private business in the other.

HEADLESS CASE SUSPECT HELD

These are the garments, found in the river by Peter Tessier of No. 216 Manville road, and Nowell Lavibelle of No. 561 Manville road. The clothing has been positively identified as belonging to Mrs. Delmar. It consists of:

White and blue shirtwaist.

Black woolen skirt.

Tan stockings and garters.

Underseothing.

The clothes tell a tragic story. They had evidently been cut loose from the body, for everywhere they are gashed and torn. The work was apparently done with a knife, for the slashes are not smooth and even such as scissors make, but jagged and zig-zagging.

The discovery of the bundle of clothing, the consequent identification of the body and the investigation that has followed Mrs. Delmar's disappearance, have resulted in the discovery of a number of facts upon which the police base a new theory of the crime.

The police say.

That Henry Deslouvre, a native of Mons-ecrou, Belgium, and Mrs. Angela Delmar, a married woman, living in Tomeoing, France, eloped about a year ago to this country.

Woman Beautiful.

Deslouvre is twenty-seven. So was the woman. He is a giant, six feet tall, weighing over 200, and immensely muscular, a splendid figure of a man. She was a Frenchwoman of the most beautiful bourgeoise type, with dark hair and flashing eyes, rich and abundant coloring and a beautiful figure and carriage.

The two lived at No. 129 Cumberland street in Woonsocket. The man—and at times the woman—worked in the local mills.

Their life, after they had fled to America, was not all happiness. The woman's beauty attracted many admirers. Men whom she met at her work or about the city liked to come and spend a few minutes at the Cumberland street home. Deslouvre, the police say, is a good-natured and jovial chap, but he objected to these attentions from other men.

Quarrels became frequent. About a month ago they reached a climax when, as Deslouvre has told the police, the woman took $40 from its hiding place beneath his pillow after investing in a sewing machine against his wishes.

There were hot words at that time, and blows were struck.

The police say that the woman was murdered on June 4. The Cumberland street house is scarcely forty feet from the river. They have learned that Deslouvre borrowed a neighbor's boat one day early in June.

From these facts they believe the body was hurried to a boat, taken out on the river and disposed of under cover of night.

Body Hidden for Days.

The condition of the garments found and identified as those of Angela Delmar indicate, the police say, that the woman's body was hidden for several days after she was killed. They believe therefore that she was struggled, hidden, and then, a few days later, that the body was taken out on the river and stripped of clothing, the head removed, and the body thrown overboard.

A sensational feature of the attempts to prevent identification of the body is the story of the tattoo marks which Angela Delmar had on her arm.

Just above the mark of a vaccination, the police say, there was the mark of tattooing, two letters, "E. D." On the body of the woman found in the river there was, at this spot near the vaccination mark, a rough abrasion. The police supposed it was a bruise received when the river current dragged the corpse along the bottom. It is now thought, however, that the tattoo marks were scraped out and that the action of the water completed their obliteration.

The police are in possession of a number of statements and bits of fact to support their theory.

Bryan's Attitude Toward Boss Murphy When Bryan Was Himself a Candidate for President for the Third Time

This photograph was printed in several New York newspapers on July 17, 1908. It shows Bryan's greeting to Murphy at the Lincoln, Neb., railroad station when Tammany was returning from the Denver Convention, where Tammany HAD UNANIMOUSLY SUPPORTED BRYAN AND WAS PUBLICLY THANKED BY BRYAN "FOR ITS GOOD WORK."

The day after the above photograph was taken the New York World which supported Bryan for President, printed on July 12, 1908 the following account of how the photograph was taken:

A photographer contributed the real sensation of the hour. Forcing his way right up to the SILENT Tammanyite and the TALKING candidate, standing side by side, he asked:

"Won't you two gents kindly hook hands and have your pictures took?"

Bryan GRINNED and Murphy DIDN'T.

"Say, Murphy, they want us to prove it."

laughed the candidate with a quizzical glance at his silent friend. For an instant Murphy hesitated.

"Shall we do it?" cried the candidate, never taking his eye from Murphy's face.

"Sure thing," snapped the New Yorker and hand in hand Bryan and Murphy faced the camera.

"Now all we need is one of those doves," said the candidate, PULLING THE NOT ENTHUSIASTIC TAMMANYITE CLOSER TO HIM, while the watching crowd broke into laughter and applause.

June 12, 1912.

Managing Editor Boston American
Dear Sir:
I want to thank you for tendering me the privilege of editing the American for a day. I entrust the Granite State New England journalism certainly a new departure, and one with which I thoroughly sympathize. I am sorry that editing a newspaper is an undertaking in which I have had no experience and it would seem a little late for me to begin now.
The American has always cooperated with the men responsible for the Progressive Movement in my state and it is always a pleasure for me to cooperate with it in so far as I can.
I will be glad therefore to contribute an article on my signature on some subject of general interest for the issue of July 14th. I will run in the night before to see the paper put together and know something of the science of journalism.
Yours truly,

Replying to yours of June 6th.
I would be pleased to comply with the request contained in your letter provided that at least one of the other New England Governors should do the same, for instance, Governor Foss. Managing Editor,

Dear Sir,
Acknowledging with thanks your letter of June 14th, I would like to express also to you my appreciation of the courtesy extended me.
I shall be very glad to furnish the leading editorial for the Sunday American of July 21st, and will probably take as the subject "Public Regulation of the Railroad Lines serving New England." My past legislatures have refused to grant it, and how to get it this Fall.
Very truly yours,

My Dear Sir
Let me thank you for the courtesy extended me in the invitation to write a leading editorial on one of your Sunday editions. I assure you it will be a pleasure to accept your invitation, and upon my return to Rutland I will be pleased to give the matter attention. We will arrange the subject and date when. Believe me
Very Cordially Yours

Managing Editor, Boston American.
Dear Sir:
I will be pleased to write for the July 28th number of the Boston American as suggested in your letter of June 14th. My contribution may not be a message to the citizens of New England, but I will try to bring to their attention matters which I shall consider of interest to them.
I do not know, at present, what my subject will be.
Respectfully yours,

CONVENTION SIDELIGHTS

BALTIMORE, July 1.—Now that the Massachusetts delegates have caught up on sleep, they are beginning to take a cheerier view of the situation. Everybody in the party had at least eight hours of genuine slumber after the last convention session, and a day of recreation helped to raise the wilted spirits of the delegates.

It will take some canvassing to make up a complete delegation for the Massachusetts seats in the convention today. Financial stringency caused many of the delegates to leave for Boston, all night sessions tired others and business at home caused many of the Massachusetts crowd to leave the convention city late Saturday night and yesterday. Baltimore prices have put a dent in everyone's pocketbook and "touches" are common.

For sticking right to the Job Humphrey O'Sullivan of Lowell will be handed the medal and all the honor that goes with it. He has not been absent from any of the protracted sessions longer than ten minutes. His continuous presence has apparently tired him less than many of the other delegates.

The price of convention tickets has broken. The speculators bought up the boatboards for $10 each and expected to unload them for $25. The top price that has been paid is $5.

Ex-Senator Arthur Harrington of Charlestown is the convention messenger for Governor Foss.

The telephone company ought to be able to pay an extra dividend from the revenue derived from Boston people who telephoned home to their wives, sweethearts, relatives and friends to explain that they would not be in Boston until Tuesday or later. Dan Daley of Brookline, John Kennedy of Roxbury, Tom Giblin, Eddie Moore, Senator Quigley, Senator Timilty and Joe Maynard were a few of the many who deposited $2 for the privilege of talking to Boston.

Delegate O'Connor of Worcester made a big hit with everybody but the cashier of the restaurant when he purchased sandwiches and oranges for the last session of the convention, and distributed them to the Massachusetts delegates. The cashier was not anxious to bring the food into the hall, but O'Connor induced him. While he was gone somebody tapped his till for $28.

The Ward 11 Democratic club is one of the most popular places in Baltimore. Its headquarters are directly across from the convention hall, and the club furnishes a buffet lunch to the delegates. Senators, Governors, Congressmen, mayors and lesser political lights are to be found constantly in attendance, and the club has done much to live up to the reputation of Southern hospitality. "It's the only thing in Baltimore that's free," said one of the delegates.

Governor Foss lacks a campaign song so he has temporarily appropriated "Sweet Adeline." Every time there is a Foss demonstration it is "Sweet Adeline" that furnishes the musical portion of it. As Mayor Fitzgerald's vice presidential boom has been lost, strayed or stolen since his arrival in Baltimore he consents to let the Governor use his material.

There are not many of the Massachusetts party now quartered at the Kernan. As soon as the rooms were up on Friday most of the delegates packed their belongings and scorched for cheaper and more commodious quarters. The hasty departure of nearly 100 caused the management to drop prices 100 per cent.

Mayor Fitzgerald, Joe Maynard, Dave Walsh and Sherman Whipple have been steering the course of the Massachusetts delegation and it has been no easy task. By diplomatic methods and masterful persuasion the quartet has been able to hold the large majority of the delegates together on the various ballots.

Representative McMorrow of Ward 23 has the distinction of being one of the youngest delegates to the convention. There is no question of his being the handsomest. Massachusetts was polled on the question at one of the conferences, and the West Roxbury boy received two more votes than David I. Walsh.

It has been a great convention for Tom Fitzgerald, son of the Mayor. He has learned to play billiards, saved Congressman Murray's life in the swimming pool at the Maryland Club, and today is scheduled to pitch nine innings for one of the Baltimore amateur baseball teams.

Richard S. Teeling, Eddie Moore, the Mayor's secretary; Joe Maynard and Representative Michael J. Brophy are roommates.

THE AMERICAN today makes perhaps the most remarkable newspaper announcement in the history of journalism.

The Governors of the five New England States have agreed to edit the Sunday AMERICAN, one each week during July and the first Sunday in August.

The Governors will take their turns as editors in this order:

On Sunday, July 7, Governor Frederick W. Plaisted of Maine.
On Sunday, July 14, Governor Robert P. Bass of New Hampshire.
On Sunday, July 21, Governor Eugene N. Foss of Massachusetts.
On Sunday, July 28, Governor Aram J. Pothier of Rhode Island.
On Sunday, August 4, Governor John A. Mead of Vermont.

In inviting the Governors of New England to supplant the regular editor on the five Sundays named, the AMERICAN suggested that each prepare a leading editorial on some subject of vital interest to the State he represents, and to select as far as practicable the news to be presented on that day.

These five "Governors' Editions" will present to the people of the New England States the most important matters that concern the general welfare.

One Governor regards good roads as a most important subject for discussion, and another public regulation of railroad lines serving New England.

Governor Bass in accepting the AMERICAN'S invitation writes:

To interest the Governors in New England journalism is certainly a new departure and one with which I thoroughly sympathize. The AMERICAN has always co-operated with the men responsible for the progressive movement in my State and it is always a pleasure for me to co-operate with it in so far as I can.

Governor Foss in his note of acceptance writes:

I shall be very glad to furnish the leading editorial for the Sunday AMERICAN of July 21 and will probably take as my subject: "Public regulation of the railroad lines serving New England; why past Legislatures have refused to grant it, and how to get it this Fall."

Governor Pothier writes:

My contribution may not be a message to the citizens of New England, but I will try to bring to their attention matters which I shall consider of interest to them.

Governor Plaisted writes:

I should be pleased to comply with the request contained in your letter.

Governor Mead writes:

I assure you it will be a pleasure to accept your invitation and upon my return to Rutland (Governor Mead wrote from Chicago) I will be pleased to give the matter attention. We will arrange the subject then.

JAPANESE WINS EMERSON GRAD

NEW YORK, July 1.—Miss Winifred Louise Barnes, a graduate of the Emerson School of Oratory in Boston, is to marry Sangora Ono, a Japanese merchant of Asbury Park, N. J.

It is intimated that the ceremony is being put off because Ono has not been baptized a Christian. When asked if this was true, Dr. George Clarke Houghton, rector of the Little Church Around the Corner, gave an indirect reply, saying Ono has been receiving instructions preparatory to baptism.

REV. J. P. DENISON OFFERS RESIGNATION

Because of illhealth, the Rev. John Hopkins Wonson, attached to the Central Congregational Church, has tendered his resignation to the presbytrial and standing committees of the church. He is now in Vienna. It is understood that the congregation does not want to accept the resignation, and that arrangements will be made to keep Rev. Mr. Denison as a minister and give him assistants enough to carry on the work.

OLLIE JAMES' NICE GOLD BADGE STOLEN

WASHINGTON, July 1.—Senator-elect Ollie James of Kentucky, permanent chairman of the Democratic National convention, caused some surprise in Washington by appearing wearing just one of the common garden variety of delegates' badges to the Baltimore convention. "Where is the badge the committee provided for you?" asked a friend, having in mind the beautiful gold emblem which Custom gives to Democrats who preside over National gatherings of their party. "Somebody stole it," said Mr. James.

LORENZ OESCHGER, aged seventy-five, one of the few remaining members of the Shaker colony at Union Village, is dead at the Shaker settlement at Lebanon, Ohio. There are now but eighteen members of the society there, which was formerly composed of 600.

CHARLES HOWARD, fifty-five, is dead at Riverbank court, Cambridge. Funeral services will be held at the chapel, Forest Hills cemetery, tomorrow at 2 o'clock.

BIG GUARD FOR PROPERTY OF "L"

As a result of the recurrence of rioting in the subways and tunnels of the Boston Elevated Railroad were under heavy guard today, and the carmen strike has resumed more of the appearance of the first few days.

William P. Cook of No. 52 Cliff street, Roxbury, was shot by Reserve Officer School during an attack upon a car on Blue Hill avenue, Roxbury, and is in a dangerous condition today at the City Hospital.

The railroad officials, fearing that violence might be attempted in the subways during the night, in a hurried call for more police, and as a result all of the stations were heavily guarded, as well as the entrances at the North Station, Pleasant and Church streets.

The executive board of the striking Street Car Men's Union declares in an official statement, that much of the disturbances and disorder of late Saturday night and early Sunday morning was caused by strike-breakers and spotters in the employ of the Boston Elevated Railway Company, who it is alleged, pursued similar tactics in Philadelphia, when they were employed as strikebreakers in that city, and also to the alleged uncalled for activity and abuse of members of the union as they were leaving their meeting by Boston police, who were acting the board alleges, under the personal directions of a division superintendent and other officials of the Elevated Company.

The Massachusetts State Branch, A. F. of L., executive board, denounce the alleged actions and activities of the Boston police force in the street car men's strike and will call for an investigation of the employment of its members during the strike.

The board reaffirmed the action of its special meeting of two weeks ago, at which call support pendlie was voted the striking street car men of Boston.

Samuel Nesstadt, nineteen, a strikebreaker, living at No. 283 Blue Hill avenue was arraigned in court today on a charge of carrying and discharging a revolver on Washington street near Auckwall road, Dorchester. He was in charge of a car from the Ashmont street car barn.

As the car was to Asquewall road a string of police were come up at side street and some boarded the car and attempted to pull Nesstadt from the platform.

According to Nesstadt he was about to be assaulted when he pulled the revolver. He jumped from the car, at the same time firing two or three shots in the air. Patrolman Samuel Winslow saw the mix-up and arrived in time to have Nesstadt run into his arms. The officer then placed him under arrest.

Murphy Predicts Big U.S. Victory

Olympic Athletes at Stockholm

THE sturdy band of American athletes which expects to carry off the highest honors at the Olympic games arrived safe and sound in Stockholm yesterday. The men disembarked from the special steamer Finland in fine spirits, satisfied that they would once again prove to the world that America is still superior in athletics.

"Mike" Murphy, the official trainer of the team and special correspondent for the AMERICAN, will now start to put the finishing touches to the many athletes. Mr. Murphy will keep our readers fully informed of the condition of their representatives and also cable any important incident or happening that will interest the millions of Americans who are deeply interested in the outcome of the greatest gathering of athletes from the world over.

By Michael J. Murphy.

Trainer of the American Olympic Team.

Special Correspondent for Boston American.

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, July 1.—The American athletes who have come here to compete in the international Olympic games got their first real workout today on Swedish soil. They were taken to the park at Rasunda, a suburb, where there is a good field and track. All the men are in good condition. The climate here is similar to that of New York. The thermometer is standing between 80 and 85 and the air is slightly humid.

YANKEE ATHLETES IN FINE SHAPE.

The residents of Stockholm have made extensive preparations to entertain the visitors from the different countries. Most of the houses are handsomely decorated with flags of the various nations, and the Stars and Stripes are well represented in the many groups.

Along the thoroughfares there are Swedish flags galore streaming from poles especially planted for the occasion.

At least several thousand athletes who will compete in the games are here. They can easily be recognized from some particular emblem either pinned on their coats, or, like our boys wear, hatbands with the insignia of their country thereon. It is a grand sight; one worth crossing the ocean to witness.

Owing to the late start from Antwerp we were one day late in reaching Stockholm, but the boys are all in good shape, and with one week in which to finish our work the delay is of no consequence.

If anything were needed to put our men in good spirits, the news which we received of the victory of the rifle team over the other nations was the final touch. As a result, it is hard to restrain the athletes, they are so anxious to get busy and add to the victorious procession begun by our shooting team.

Track Not the Best to Work on.

After breakfast the men were permitted to take a long walk about Stockholm to see the sights. After lunch, we headed for the athletic field for our first work on Swedish grounds. The track selected for us is very unsatisfactory, and I could not let the men do any fast work for fear of injury, but they had a good workout to rid themselves of their sea legs.

One would think that he was in New York on a hot Summer day, so much like our climate is that of Stockholm, and I am confident that none of the boys will be in any way affected by the change. The Marathoners were in their element on the hard track, and raced about for a full hour without showing any signs of fatigue.

They will be shipped out to the country, about ten miles from the city, where they will be able to get absolute rest at night and do most of their work over the good roads.

Wonderful Stories About McArthur.

We have heard some great stories of the wonderful running of McArthur, the South African, who is reported to be able to smash all long-distance records. This does not worry our boys a bit, and they will go into the race prepared to make any one who leads them break records, for we have without a doubt the best squad of long-distance men which ever wore the American colors.

Tomorrow we will have another field to train on. The boys will get down to hard work, particularly the men entered in the 800 and 1,500 metre runs, whose events are among t he best to be contested. Of the men who will run the 800 on Saturday, there is not one when I have any fear of, and they should be the winners of the three places in the final.

Mr. Sullivan and myself took a walk out to the Stadium this morning and examined the track. It is of very fine construction and appears wonderfully fast. It is the best track ever built for Olympic games, and our fast men will certainly break records on it before the meet is over.

The officials of the games are very courteous and are doing everything to make us feel at home. I will be very much surprised if anything occurs to spoil the feeling of good fellowship and harmony which now prevails.

Athletes Will Remain on Finland.

The Swedish officials I have met thus far admit that we will win most of the prizes. They are looking for our team to set an example to the Swedish youths, which will give the sport a great impetus and help them to develop men for the next Olympiad.

Now that we are on the ground and every man is in good shape after the long trip, we are all more confident that America will make a showing in the Olympics that will astonish even our best friends. We will have hard work winning some of the events, for every nation is going out to establish the reputation of the United States as the leader of the world in athletic sports, and we will complete our plans this week to insure a clean sweep.

A Mack Ballad

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

In his Philadelphia cottage,
Eating scrapple with his pottage,
Sat a leader by the name of Connie Mack.
While this tall, thin man was eating
He was planning on repeating
All the triumphs that he knew one season back.

"So you think your chance looks bonny?"
A reporter asked old Connie.
"Don't you fear that Boston team so far ahead?"
Then the eyes of Mack grew brighter
As he faced the baseball writer
And between large bites of scrapple Connie said:

Chorus:

"When the harvest days are over, laddie dear,
We'll be fighting with the Giants, never fear!
You can bet your auburn locks
We'll have caught and passed the Sox
When the harvest days are over, laddie dear."

Harrison, Everett-Chelsea's star outfielder, who is out of the game with a broken jaw, retains his hold on third place with a mark of .391, and Yates of Salem is fourth with .388. Those taking part in five or more games and hitting over .300 in the new circuit are as follows:

Pfeffer, Dorchester, .411; Kiernan, South Boston, .407; Harrison, Everett-Chelsea, .391; Yates, Salem, .388; Darrow, Salem, .367; Bean, Dorchester, .357; Crook, Dorchester, .352; Mulligan, Lynn, .333; Sullivan, Dorchester, .333; Marshall, Everett-Chelsea, .333; Drummond, Somerville, .329; Miller, Everett-Chelsea, .328; Mackey, Everett-Chelsea, .320; Porter, Lynn, .319; Robinson, Salem, .317; Briggs, Everett-Chelsea, .310; Shaughnessy, Dorchester, .309; Lahey, Somerville, .307; Morgan, Salem, .301; Melvin, Somerville, .300; Ladd, Somerville, .300.

RED SOX HAVE YANKEES AGAIN

With thirteen straight victories safely tucked away as a record of games with the New York Yankees, the Red Sox tackle the Wolverton boys again this afternoon and it is the plan of leader Jake Stahl to keep the new Yorkers from winning a single game of this, the third series between the two old rivals.

The Yanks are hopelessly out of the Red Sox class as the two double headers on Friday and Saturday go to show, but still they are dangerous at all times and the Speed Boys will take no chances in either of today's game or tomorrow's farewell session with the New Yorkers.

The Yankees have been about the softest kind of picking for the Boston boys this season. Not a game has gone Yankeeward, since the two teams began to mingle at the opening of the pennant race.

Manager Wolverton has the poorest aggregation of ball tossers that has ever represented the big city in the American league. And the Red Sox are using full advantage of their weakness by corralling all of the games and boosting their own standing.

Just to show that he has more than one or two twirlers that can hold their own, Manager Jake will send Larry Gardner or Collins to the mound this afternoon. Wolverton hopes that either Quinn or "Slim" Caldwell will feed the offering.

After to-morrow's game with the Yanks the Red Sox will take a flying trip to Philadelphia where they will meet Mack's world champions five games, including a double-header on the holiday. They will return home on the 8th for a long stay, opening against St. Louis.

Detroit, Chicago and Cleveland are also on the home list of games, after which the Stahl team will get away again on a trip through the West.

SUNDAY BALL IN CAPITAL LIKELY

DETROIT, July 1.—Sunday baseball in Washington is a possibility in the near future. A conference held by President Ban B. Johnson and Manager Griffith at the former's office recently resulted in the head of the league giving his approval of such a change in the schedule and incidentally immediately taking the matter up with the other officials of the Washington club.

Griffith contends that a majority of the people in Washington want Sunday games. He says that it has been urged to him by those most interested in the project that Sunday baseball would be a blessing in disguise for those inhabitants of the nation's capital who cannot afford to attend games during the week, and who have no place to spend their Sundays.

GEORGE STOVALL IS AFTER NEW PLAYERS

ST. LOUIS, July 1.—If the scouts can bring in the talent this Summer and this Fall there will be little resemblance between the 1912 and 1913 Browns. This is looking far, far ahead, but Manager Stovall has adopted such a system, preparing for the future.

Of course, Stovall is anxious to make a good record this season, and if possible shove some other team down into last place, but at present he is laying his foundation on the 1913 Browns.

Stovall, naturally, is not satisfied with the team he owns and he doesn't make a secret, and if youngsters of fair major league knowledge arrive this Fall the fans may see an entirely new set of athletes in the Spring of 1913.

HOYT MAKES TWO NEW GOLF MARKS

Two new amateur records were set up for the Orford Country Club at Chicopee Falls by F. H. Hoyt of the Waushacum and Alfred Call Clubs. He was on his way to participate in the State team match between Connecticut and Massachusetts at Hartford, but stopped off long enough to put up two marks for the nine-hole course at Chicopee which ought to stay for a long time.

Hoyt scored a 36 on his first trip over the links and a 33 for the second, the first round establishing the nine-hole record, and the total of 75 lowering the former eighteen-hole mark by five strokes.

Orford has recently changed their links and greatly improved them, and as the course is 3,070 yards in length and abounds in natural hazards, the scoring of Hoyt was considered very remarkable.

His card:

WOLGAST RULES 2-1 CHOICE OVER RIVERS

LOS ANGELES, Cal., July 1.—Two terrible smiters are Ad Wolgast and Joe Rivers. These ferocious fighters are going to turn their toughest batteries on each other July 4 and it suggests the old high school problem of what happens when a body moving with irresistible force encounters an immovable object.

Both, though younger, has a gory record equally sanguine. He not only knocks his men out, but he half kills them. He has knocked out eleven men, fought four draws and won four decisions. Because he's champion and because Rivers has shown that he can be knocked out by a man of Kilbane's ability, Wolgast is a 2 to 1 favorite.

GIANTS HATE TO TACKLE PILGRIMS

NEW YORK, July 1.—The Pilgrims have proven so easy for the Giants this season that the members of McGraw's outfit really feel contempt at the thought of tackling them again today.

The Giants are making such a runaway race of it in the National League that the local fans are losing some interest in the affair. New York fans like to see the home team win, but they also like to see a battle.

The Pilgrims, just at the present time, are the weakest looking organization seen at the Polo Grounds this season. This afternoon Muggsy will send Tesreau to the slab to take another fall out of the lowly Boston men, while Manager Kling will call on Lefty Tyler.

GIBBONS AND BURNS IN NEW YORK BOUT

NEW YORK, July 1.—Mike Gibbons, the speedy St. Paul boxer, will clash with Sid Burns, welterweight champion of England, in a ten-round bout at Madison Square Garden, New York, tonight. Gibbons is one of the most sensational mixers in the ring today, and he should be returned the winner. Johnny Dundee will meet Young Saghrue in a contest preceding the Gibbons-Burns affair. Dundee and Saghrue are both classy performers, and the fighting is sure to be fast and furious.

HERRICK FIGHTS MORROW TO DRAW

EL PASO, Tex., July 1.—Howard Morrow of Buffalo and Jack Herrick of Chicago fought a twenty-round battle to a draw in the Juarez bull ring. The decision was unpopular, most of the spectators favoring Morrow.

U. S. OLYMPIC STARS IN ROW

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, July 1.—There is discord and dissatisfaction in the camp of the American track and field athletes who will compete in the Olympic games.

The members of the American team today demanded that the American committee arrange quarters for them at a hotel. The athletes have become dissatisfied with the living aboard the Finland.

Mike Murphy and the other powers in the American camp declare that the men must remain on the Finland, as the training facilities are better on board ship than they would be on shore.

The coaches will also be able to keep in closer touch with the men if they are all gathered together on board a single ship. It would be impossible to get accommodations for the Yanks athletes at any one hotel.

The expense of putting up the athletes at a hotel would also be very large and as the Finland is large it is very small the committee believes that it is best to keep the athletes on the Finland, where it will not be necessary to pay extra board.

The athletes say that they cannot do themselves justice unless they are quartered on land. They argue that it is impossible to get in good workouts on a poorly erected wooden track shoved ship.

Several of the men have been injured while training on the Finland. Mayer Long had his ankle severely sprained, while Moj Rhoden and Jimmy Thorpe also suffered injuries.

These injuries the athletes claim would certainly not occur in training over solid ground on land.

The Marathon runners were the first to protest training on the Finland. They jointly claimed that they could not work out on the Finland. The committee in charge then decided to have the marathon runners lodge in camp.

Many of the athletes were informed that the marathoners had received permission to take quarters on land they also asked for a similar right.

They were turned down flatly and they are now pondering over what they will do. Big disturbance in the American camp.

Outsider at 30 to 1 Wins Grand Prix Race

PARIS, July 1.—The Grand Prix de Paris, the big ribbon event of the French turf, was won by Achille Fould's bay colt Hourl, an outsider in the betting. August Belmont's bay colt Amoreux III was fourth. W. K. Vanderbilt's entry, Sigally, was not placed.

The Grand Prix was worth 125,000 francs. Hourl was quoted at 30 to 1 and Amoreux III at 14 to 1.

Vast throngs witnessed the classic event at Longchamps race. President Fallieres, accompanied by the cabinet ministers, was present. Many of the diplomatic representatives and a great number of Americans attended.

SCHOOLBOY GOLFERS OPEN BIG TOURNEY AT WOODLAND LINKS

The interscholastic golf championships, a thing starting this season, but are known which will be held at Woodland today, to be golfers of merit, and I were put on tomorrow and Wednesday afternoon give the team for this reason promise of surpassing all previous tournaments held under the auspices of the Greater Boston Interscholastic Golf Association.

Fairly entries have been received for the tourney, including some of the best schoolboy golfers in New England. Trinity, Columbia and John Hopkins of Baltimore, University Preparatory School, champion and runner-up, respectively, last year, have both entered, and the battle for championship honors is sure to be close and spirited.

A. D. Knight, Worcester High, winner of the gold medal two years ago, forwarded his entry along with three other Worcester high school boys, and is expected to make a better showing than he did a year ago.

The qualifying round will be played this morning, and the golfer making the lowest score will receive a silver medal. John H. Sullivan Jr. won the medal last year, Judging from the golf to be played this morning he is likely to come near duplicating his achievement this morning. The Brae Burn golfers of Hill School, Pottstown, Penn., former winners of Newsmaker School, West Newton, entered last night, and this youngster may surprise some of the other schoolboys in the qualifying round.

Massachusetts golfers are to congregate on their win at Hartford Saturday when the Massachusetts team will play a match. Some of the best Boston players will be entered, A. G. Lockwood, W. P. Hall and H. W. Strickler being numbered among the disputers. H. W. Wilder has been team captain and one of the best players was not on hand either. The places of these notables were taken by F. Crocker, P. H. Dorr, S. K. Sterne, W. E. Styles and W. M. Wait. None of these last named players have done any scoring.

Clothier and Gardner Win New Honors

MANCHESTER-BY-THE-SEA, July 1.—Clothier and Gardner, the tennis stars, added new laurels to their crown when they won the invitation round robin men's doubles tournament on the Essex County Club courts.

In a three-set match, which required sixty-two games to decide, Niles and Dabney won out, thus tying with Clothier and Gardner.

Niles and Dabney started off well by winning the first set 6-4. Clothier and Gardner came back into form in the next set, 6-3. In the third set the score was tied at 5-5 when Clothier and Gardner lost their service. Niles and Dabney won out, 7-5.

THREE TITLE BOUTS ON CARD FOR THE HOLIDAY

By JACK CONWAY

JULY FOURTH will be a busy day in the boxing world. Three championship bouts are down on the card which will give fight fans plenty to talk about. Jack Johnson will battle with Jim Flynn at Las Vegas, N. M., for the negro's championship of the world. Ad Wolgast will clash with Joe Rivers at Ascot Park, Los Angeles, in a bout to settle the lightweight championship of the world. Battling Nelson will meet Jimmy Clabby at Colma, Cal., in a bout to settle the middleweight championship of the world.

Following the announcement that Johnson and Flynn had signed articles to fight on July 4 at Las Vegas, Jack Johnson issued a statement in which he said:

"I will be glad to get back in the ring again. It has been a long time since I fought, and I am anxious to show the public that I am not through. I am in good condition and will be ready to fight Flynn on the Fourth of July. I have been training for the fight for some time, and I am sure that I will be able to defeat him. I am confident that I will win the fight, and I am sure that I will be able to defeat him. I am confident that I will win the fight, and I am sure that I will be able to defeat him."

Johnson's opponent, Jim Flynn, is a well-known fighter. He has been fighting for many years, and has had a number of successful fights. He is a strong fighter, and is expected to put up a good fight against Johnson.

The fight will be held at the Las Vegas Athletic Club, and will be open to the public. Tickets are on sale at the box office, and are selling well. The fight is expected to draw a large crowd, and the promoters are hoping for a big gate.

THE BOSTON AMERICAN'S DAILY DOUBLE

Cooking Secrets of a Famous Chef

By Emile Bailly, of the Hotel St. Regis, New York

PEOPLE sometimes criticize our French cooking and say that it is too elaborate and over-decorated.

A good cook knows enough about the chemistry of the body to prepare food of appealing to the eye as well as to the taste.

You who cook for a small family, people who live in boarding houses, men who eat in stuffy offices, and women who work all the time in body-tiring trades, both need an artificial stimulus for a good appetite and sufficient gastric juice. This stimulus can often be found in viewing spotless papery, flowers and shining silver, and one or two well-cooked and daintily served dishes.

Fruit Juices Good

A delicate bouillon also stimulates the appetite, and two fruit juices are used with particularly good effect, especially here in America. These fruits are the orange and the grape fruit.

The latter contains a proportion of quinine and is a tonic, while the properties of the orange are a promoter of appetite as well known.

The best part, so far as the food part of the orange, which should be eaten, is the juice. Consequently that method of preparing it which gives one the pure juice without pulp is the best. Many people object to drinking the out of a glass and want to see the peel and smell the delicate aroma of the oil in the orange peel. That is another appeal to the gastric juices, which are also stimulated by the sense of smell.

The combination of several ways of serving oranges popular in different countries, especially in the South, where the orange grows.

A Cuban method impales the peeled orange on a fork after it has been peeled with a sharp knife. A round slice is taken through, bathed, and to her berth with the top and bottom of the orange. One of these pieces is put on the fork making a resting place for the orange, which comes next and the last piece is placed over the orange.

The South American Way.

Easy to Eat

The orange is eaten without soiling the fingers and only the pulp is left on the fork. The ordinary way of serving an orange is to cut it right in half around the centre and place it in cracked ice. When the orange is eaten in this manner too much pulp is consumed. A South American way shows the orange cut in half, the skin turned back after being separated from the orange by a spoon drawn under it. When eaten in this manner only the juice is taken.

Oranges and grape fruit were not for decorative purposes and make excellent receptacles for salads, fruits and desserts. The pool can be scraped free of pulp, dried and kept as a seasoning and a perfume.

The Manicure Lady

"LIBRARIES is great things, ain't they, George?" asked the Manicure Lady. "I think there is something awful grand about a library. There is so many books later, and all that."

"I never went into no library," said the Head Barber, "since I was a kid. The only book I had a lot of books at home, and I used to read some of them when I had been a bad kid and was locked in, but since then I don't know no more about libraries than I do about the inside of a zoo."

"Cheer up, George!" said the Manicure Lady, sweetly. "Remember that while there is life there is hope. But I was starting out to tell you something, George. It seems that Wilfred has a friend that is attendant at the big public library, and the other night the old scout took Wilfred and me and this library fellow out for a evening. I don't think father meant to extend his hospitality outside of the regular family circle, and he would just as soon have barred Wilfred at that, but the other wasn't feeling well, so Pa wanted to use up his four seats. We all went to a swell show and after the show we went over to one of them Lobster Palaces that I hear so much about and eat so little in. Father and Eddie Dunn bought all the drinks—not that Wilfred wouldn't have bought if he had had the price—and so I suppose the library attendant figured but it was up to him to give us some kind of a return party. So he invites us to the library.

It was a grand treat to me. Me and Father and Wilfred roamed around among them books for a hour or two like children. The old gent had a right to like all I told over and on the way downtown he had went into their place to telephone, so's you can see he was equipped for to look over the looks of a lot of grand books. We at least have seen a acks of 20,000 books, for one of them had their titles printed on the sacks so you could read them just plain.

"There was one room, set there that I would like to have took some time to, if I had a day. It was called the Room of Fall of the Roman Empire. Who was subject to age some Isabella, writes?

"No," replied the Head Barber, "Isabella is a middle-weight prize fighter, and you can take it from me that he is a real cat. He can hit an hard as Dan Sprout and he is almost as fast as Jeff Bank Sullivan."

"Oh, you are thinking about a different kind of man things be," says Miss Manicure Lady. "But this is the writer I mean. It's Emily Isabella Gibbon. You don't know the man that wrote the Rise and Fall of the Roman Empire.

"And there was a lot of other swell books, too. There was the Waverly Place novels, by Sir Walter Goldsmith, and the complete works of Charles Byron and Lord Goldsmith. I never nothing of the smaller writers that I never took no time to read. But all the time I was wishing I was down to Revere. Some old guy never showed up, and I think he wondered the beauty of books, but give me Revere Beach when it is lit up at night."

They Didn't Care Where

HAMLET DE BROKE, the great tragedian—in his own estimation—was talking.

"But, above all, I am an artist, he said, speaking of himself as usual, to his listeners openly yawned. "From the moment I make my first appearance on the stage, I forget everything but my part. I leave my own personality behind me. I am Romeo, Othello, or the Wandering Jew. The theatre vanishes; the audience disappears——"

"Yes; I've noticed that!" broke in one of his victims, rousing himself.

"What?" asked Hamlet etc.

"That the audience disappears!" said the interrupter, falling asleep again

Married Life the Third Year

No. 53—Warren Scolds Helen for Forgetting but Leaves His Watch Under the Pillow

By MABEL HERBERT URNER

"NOW you'd better go down and get packed up tonight. You won't have any time in the morning. We'll be at Plymouth by five."

"All right." Helen turned from the railing, where she was watching the faint glimmer of a distant lighthouse—the first sign of Land. Why, Warren, they won't put us off that early!"

"They'll put us off whenever we get there. I told you they weren't going to stop. Were to be put off on a tender—the—don't dock until she gets to Hamburg.

"Say, the small boat which comes out to meet us? You'll have to hustle down and get your things packed. I'll have a trunk and be down a little later."

It was the last night of the voyage, and Helen was standing around watching the faroff light and taking of the extreme southern course the ship had taken to avoid the heavy seas and the time they had lost.

They all seemed imbued with the restless anticipation that comes with the sight of land—even the five London [illegible] getting off at Plymouth, and the [illegible] to Hamburg [illegible].

[illegible] went down to the [illegible] packing, she knew [illegible] end in a game [illegible] consoling room, where he [illegible] time during the trip [illegible] and hours [illegible] last night they would spend on deck together.

Because of the small stateroom she had tried not to unpack many things, but one article after another had been needed during the trip, and now she found the packing no small task.

It was after 11 when, at last, she was through, bathed, and in her berth. But Warren had not yet come down—and he still had his things to pack. She would gladly have done it for him, but he would never let her. Said he could never find things when she put them in.

At length there was a heavy step down the passageway, and he threw open the stateroom door.

"All through?" as he began to take off his collar.

"Why, yes, dear, almost an hour ago. It's nearly 12, isn't it? You know you've everything to pack, and those steamer rugs to strap up."

"Now, don't worry about me. I'll have plenty of time for all I've got to do. I told that steward to rout me out at 4."

"But, dear"—as he was proudly making ready for bed, "you're not going to leave everything the morning—and you'd have to shave too?"

"Look here—you're ready, aren't you? Well see until you are—and don't go off forgetting half your things. I'll attend to mine."

And he turned out the light and climbed heavily into the upper berth.

It seemed to Helen that she had hardly fallen asleep when the steward pounded loudly on the door.

Four O'Clock, Sir

"Hath ready, sir. Four o'clock?"

While Helen was dressing and before Warren came back from his bath, another steward knocked at the door.

"Luggage ready for Plymouth, m'am?"

Helen opened the door and pointed to her steamer trunk and bag. "These are ready—but Mr. Curtis hasn't quite finished packing yet."

"He'll have to hurry m'am," as he dragged hers out. "Almost all the luggage is off now."

"Oh, is the tender here already?" anxiously.

"She's been het for an hour. She's 'round on t'other side."

"Oh, Warren, you'll have to hurry." was Helen's excited greeting when he came from his bath. "The tender is here already—and they're putting on the baggage."

Warr a grunt something under his breath, but he began to hurry.

"Can't I help you? Isn't there anything I can do?"

"Yes, just get out and let me have what room there is."

Helen gathered up her hat and veil and went out into the passage to put them on. She could hear Warren moving briefly about.

"Luggage ready, m'am?" It was the chief steward this time.

"I—I think so," she faltered, and he knocked at the stateroom.

"Luggage ready, sir? Everybody's on now, sir. Ship's ready to pull off."

The words struck terror to Helen, but Warren threw open the door with a rush.

"Well it's all people off at this end," handed boy you'll have to wait till they get ready. Here, you can take this trunk."

Through the open door Helen could see Warren flinging things into his suit case with more haste than she had ever seen him exert. His hat was on the back of his head and he was unmistakably worried. She longed to go to him and help him, but feared he would only roar at her to keep out of the way. Suddenly he called:

Where's the Shawlstrap?

"Where's that shawlstrap?"

"Why, here it is there!" rushing in to find him struggling with the big roll of steamer rugs and coats and looking desperately about for the shawlstrap.

"Where'd you put it?" he shouted.

"Why, dear, I didn't see it; you unrolled the rugs."

"Yes, and I put it right there on top of that wardrobe."

Helen climbed up on the berth to look on top of the wardrobe, but only a life preserver was there. In the meantime Warren was raging wildly for the stateroom confirmed, in some of their most interesting details, by the results of modern exploration, which seeks only for hard stone, and even mounds them on as injected and surprising ways. PART II.—(Continued)

"WELL, now, that's curious," he answered cheerfully. "I can only say one of you, but I'm glad to have you call, stranger, anyway. Come right in. Are you sent by my friend to hinder cheer me up? I find this big city of yours a powerful kind of tonic after Wyoming. Come right in."

Mr. White was so greatly nonplussed by the newcomer's attitude as by his flow of language.

Within the drawing room Corbett caught sight of the second detective. "Hello! Here's the other one. Very glad to meet you both. Now, if you'll just tell me your names we'll get along straight away, as I guess you know mine all right."

The man was genuinely pleased by this unexpected visit. He smilingly pushed toward them a box of cigars, green ones, and helped himself to a weed.

"My name," said the detective, "is Inspector White of Scotland Yard, and my friend here accompanies me officially."

"And hasn't he got a name?"

"Yes; but it doesn't matter."

"Well, if it doesn't matter, we won't quarrel. I guess you've got a message of some sort for me, else you wouldn't trouble to climb these stairs. Why don't you have elevators in these big buildings?"

"As I said," began Mr. White, "we are from Scotland Yard."

"That's so. I've got that fixed O. K. Your name is I. White, from Scotland Yard. I don't know where Scotland Yard is, but we'll worry along without the geography of it."

"I am in the police. My title is inspector. It is not my Christian name. Scotland Yard is the headquarters of the London police.

The American's eyes opened wide in wonder at this announcement, and a perplexing thought seemed to occur to him. But he said, quietly:

"I'll figure it out better when you tell me why you've been good enough to call. And suppose we all sit down. I'm not used to stone pavements. I'm tired."

"Your name is Sydney H. Corbett?" said the detective, severely, though he took a chair.

"So my people always told me."

"And you have occupied these chambers since August last?"

"Have I?"

"So I am informed."

"Get along with your story."

"You have just returned to England from Wyoming. The New York police cabled me that you arrived in Liverpool yesterday."

American Methods

"Did they, now? That was real cute of 'em."

"I want to ask you, in the first instance, the exact date of your departure from this country."

Before replying to the detective Corbett looked at him fixedly, as though he was trying to read what was passing in his mind.

At last he said with a smile:

"Say, what are you after, Mr. White of Scotland Yard? What's the game? Who's been fooling you?"

"That is not the way to talk to me, sir. Answer my question fully and promptly, or it may be worse for you."

"Jehosh! Have you come to wipe the floor with me?"

"Are you going to reply to me or not?"

"I'm not going to speak square to any man who comes along and puts a thing like you do."

"Very well. I can get my information by other means. You leave me no alternative."

Mr. White had half risen and was about to add, "but to arrest you," when, with a rapidity known only to those accustomed to "draw" from boyhood, Corbett whipped a revolver from a hip pocket and covered the bridge of White's nose with the muzzle.

"Just you sit still, right there, Mr. White of Scotland Yard, or I will let daylight through you and your nameless friend if he interferes. You'd better believe me. By gad! I won't speak twice."

Neither White nor his companion was a coward. But they were quite helpless. They had not grappled with the circumstances with sufficient alertness, and they were utterly at this man's mercy. They were away from the door, and a table separated them from Corbett, while there was that in his eye which told them he would shoot if either of them moved. They both sprang to their feet, and glared at him impotently.

"Now, gentlemen," said Corbett, with the utmost coolness, "let me persuade you to sit down again and go on with your story, which interests me."

White was scarlet with wrath and annoyance.

"Let me tell you——" he roared.

"Sit down!"

"Make the best of it," Jim," murmured the other policeman; and the queer gathering resumed their seats.

"That's better," said Corbett genially. "Now, we'll have a nice little chat. As I correct in supposing that you were about to march me off to jail just now, when I spoilt the proposition?"

"There's no use in resisting," growled White. "You cannot escape. If you have an atom of sense left you will come with us quietly, as it's all up with you."

"It looks like it," said Corbett, with a grim smile. "But if it's so bad a case as all that, there's no desperate hurry, is there?"

"You're only making matters more difficult for yourself."

"Maybe. But as I happen to be a citizen of the United States, I allow that I can't be whipped off to prison just because a fool like you thinks it's good for you. I've been a law-abiding man all my life, and I've lived in places where each man made his own law. If you can show good cause for your action, I'll stand the racket. At present I regard you as a blamed idiot."

The situation overcame the detective. He could only mutter:

"Time will show who's the idiot."

"I'm getting hungry, Mr. White of Scotland Yard, and I've a kind of notion that the old lady is ready with the eatables. Will you be good enough to say what you're after?"

"I came here to ask you to account for your movements, and, failing a satisfactory explanation, to arrest you."

"On what charge?"

"For being concerned in the murder of Lady Dyke, on or about November 6 last."

"Lady Dyke!"

"Yes."

"Arrest me?"

"Yes."

"I placed you right away. You are a blamed idiot, Mr. White of Scotland Yard."

This repetition of his name and address goaded the detective almost beyond endurance.

"Now you know the charge!" he shouted, "are you coming with us quietly, or——"

"Or what?"

The revolver still hovered across the table.

"Are we going to sit here all night?"

It was a weak conclusion, but to suggest an attack was sheer madness under the conditions.

"I guess not," was the calm answer. "I want my dinner, and I mean to have it."

"Very well. Eat your dinner and have done with it."

"That's better. You and your friend chell join me. We'll have a nice little talk and straighten out matters, which have got kinder mixed."

This was too much for White's associate. He burst out laughing.

"I allowed there was a joke in the deal somewhere," went on Corbett, "but I haven't quite got the hang of it yet. Now Mr. White of Scotland Yard, are you going to act like a reasonable man, or must I keep your nose in line with the barrel?"

White was saved from deciding which horn of the dilemma he would land on, for a sharp rat-tat at the door induced silence, and a moment later Bruce's voice was heard inquiring:

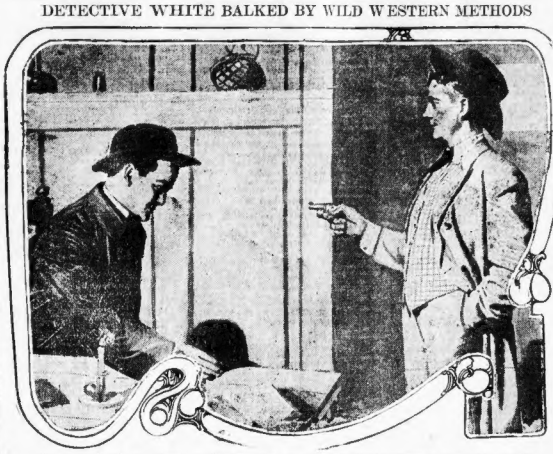
"Is Mr. Corbett in?"

"Fair, there may be a half-dozen of him in by this time," cried Mrs. Robinson. "I dunno where I am, at all, at all. The gintlemen are in the parlor, sir."

And Bruce entered.

In order to enfilade the new comer scientifically, Corbett backed into the corner.

DETECTIVE WHITE BALKED BY WILD WESTERN METHODS



"Just you sit still, Mr. White, of Scotland Yard, or I will let daylight through you," said Corbett.

(Charles Windsor of "The Wall Street Girl" Company, as Detective White.)

Claude glanced at the three, saw the revolver, and said with a comical air of relief:

"Thank goodness, nothing has happened. Put away your pistol, Mr. Corbett; you will not need it."

Although the barrister's manner differed considerably from the brusque methods adopted by Mr. White, the American remained on his guard. He said stiffly:

"You all seem to know me fairly well; but if you had the advantage of closer acquaintance, you would allow that I am not the man to be rushed on a confidence trick. If somebody doesn't explain quick I will lose my temper, and there will be trouble."

"I sympathize with you," cried Bruce. "But the first thing you must learn in this country is to keep dry cigars for your visitors. Our respective tastes differ in that respect."

"I guess I'll cotton to you, stranger; but I'm tired holding this pistol."

The Wrong Man

"Put it away, then. I tell you it is not wanted. White, listen to me. You have hit upon the wrong man."

"Wrong man!" cried the detective, feeling more confident in the barrister's presence. "Why, I've had a cable about him from New York."

"Possibly; but you're mistaken, nevertheless. Mr. Corbett has not been within five thousand miles of England for years, possibly not in his life."

"Bully for you, stranger!" broke in Corbett.

"Then who is Mr. Sydney H. Corbett, whom you believe, as well as I, to be the murderer of Lady Dyke?"

"Steady, White The last time I saw you I appealed to you to go slow. The man whom you want, simply because he happens to be the real occupant of these rooms, is at present travelling to London as fast as he can from Florence, and his sister, Mrs. Hillmer, is with him."

"Florence! Mrs. Hillmer!" gasped the policeman. "I've just arranged to have her watched there."

"Your arrangements, though admirable, are somewhat late in the day."

"Then what is her brother's name?"

"Albert Mensmore. For some reason, hidden at this moment, he lived here under the name of the gentleman who has, I see, been giving you a practical lesson in the art of not jumping at conclusions."

"Have you known this long?"

"For some weeks."

"Then why didn't you tell me?"

"Because I have no definite reason for connecting Mensmore with Lady Dyke's death. If I had, his action in returning to London the moment he hears of the charge would shake my belief."

"Who told him?"

"Mrs. Hillmer."

"Oh, this business is quite beyond me. I can't fathom it a little bit."

And White sank dejectedly to his chair again.

"I don't know what you're talking about, gentlemen," said Corbett, pocketing his revolver; "but it dawns upon me that I shan't be required to shoot anybody or sleep in jail tonight."

"Why didn't you answer my questions properly, and save all this nonsense?"

"I'll tell you why, sir. The name of a friend of mine has been mentioned. Albert Mensmore has been more than a brother to me. I allowed you meant mischief to him, as you thought you were talking to him all the time. I hope that your first action would not be to give away your chum if he is in trouble."

The detective did not answer, though his look of astonishment at Corbett's declaration of motive was eloquent enough.

Before we quit this business," went on the American, "let me say one thing. Any man who tells you that Albert Mensmore murdered a woman is telling you a lie. I don't know anything about this Lady Dyke, or how she may have died, but I do know my friend. He's good in a tight place, but, to think of him killing a woman—Jehosh! it's sickening."

PROBE OF N. E. ROADS BEGUN

The Interstate Commerce Commission today began in the Federal Building, Boston, its hearing of the many complaints that have been made against New England railroads. This hearing is the most important investigation into the condition of New England railroads that has ever been conducted and before it is completed there will be a complete survey of the entire situation. Chairman Prouty himself is presiding.

The commission will thoroughly investigate all of the charges of alleged discriminatory rates, overcharges, delayed shipments and other annoyances made against the New York, New Haven & Hartford, the Boston & Maine and the Boston & Albany.

There is a vast amount of evidence. The railroads had announced that they would help the commission in every particular and render it every courtesy.

Mellen May Testify.

It is expected that before the probe is finished President Mellen and Vice-President Timothy J. Byrnes of the New Haven and Boston & Maine railroads and a number of other railroad officials will have been summoned before the board.

The commission has the power to order the railroad officials to produce any or all books of the companies that it may desire in conducting its investigation.

Farmers and shippers from all over New England will testify as to conditions.

Chairman Prouty, in opening the hearing today, emphasized that the hearing would investigate three aspects of the railway situation; first, the financial aspect, second, the practical aspect, and third and most important, the question of the service rendered the public. On this last, he said, he would place the most emphasis.

E. C. Buckland, one of the vice presidents of the New Haven system, appeared for the Mellen road. He said that the New Haven would be very glad to take every matter up that the commission should suggest. The road, he said, desired to hold to a spirit of co-operation and avoid any antagonism. He believed that the New Haven had been giving good service for the past seven years. He declared that he was willing to court any charge that might be made.

Nashua Merchant on Stand.

W. E. Holbrook of Nashua, a wholesale grocer, upon examination before the commission, said:

"Regarding the delays in freight between Keene and Nashua and other points in New England, the freight houses should be made larger and the number of men handling the freight should be increased.

In handling freight from Nashua to Concord, it often takes from three to five days. We had better service before we had this central zone system, which looks well in theory but does not work well in practice.

"I speak here for many merchants in New England who complain about the serious delays in handling their freight.

H. W. Lane of Keene, N. H., a well-known shoe manufacturer, said:

"It takes from two to three days to get freight from Boston to Keene. We have general complaint from our Western customers about the shipping of our freight from New England to Western points."

Explains Freight Methods.

B. R. Pollock, general freight agent of New York, New Haven & Hartford Railway, told the commission by means of a series of maps how freight was handled from New York to New England points and gave the time and service rendered. He also explained where the central zone places were and how freight was taken from large centered trade to the smaller ones.

BRYAN RUSHED TO MEET MURPHY

(From New York American, July 11, 1908.)

BRYAN WILL MEET MURPHY AT DEPOT.

Tammany Leader in Such Haste to Get Home Cannot Stop off at Lincoln. Candidate Beseiged.

Makes Emotional Speech From His Porch; Is Photographed Among Cowboys.

LINCOLN, Neb., July 10.—Charles F. Murphy, Tammany leader, will not visit Fairview on his way East to greet William Jennings Bryan. Therefore Minozmet Bryan will go to the railroad station in Lincoln to greet Mountain Murphy, as the New York delegation's special train passes through the city.

This was the result today of two telegrams. The first to Mr. Bryan read:

"Sincere congratulations on your nomination. I regret that circumstances and imperative home engagements prevent acceptance of your kind invitation which came to us through your brother. Our party is due at Lincoln at 2:30 tomorrow and if absolutely convenient and only in that event, we will be glad to greet you at the station.

"CHARLES F. MURPHY."

Mr. Bryan's reply was:

"I will meet you at the station.

"W. J. BRYAN."

BRYAN LOSES MANY VIRGINIA FRIENDS BY ATTACK ON RYAN

NORFOLK, July 1.—From all parts of Virginia today went numbers of Democrats bound for Baltimore to attend the national convention. Former Virginia friends of William J. Bryan are not pleased with his attack on Thomas F. Ryan as a delegate from this State, and the Commoner, once so strong here, has lost many friends.

J. J. Blick, who stumped several States for Bryan during two of his campaigns, says the Nebraskan by his attitude at the convention, both in his attacks on the Virginia delegation and his refusal to vote for Clark because the New York delegates voted for him, has done the party more harm than Bryan, Belmont or Morgan ever did.

J. Y. Joiner, Superintendent of Public Construction for North Carolina, declared the two-third rules of the convention, which has so far deprived Champ Clark of the nomination, will cost the party many votes. Mr. Joiner says Clark, who was the choice of a majority of States, should have the nomination without being required to get two-thirds of the votes. He says the danger of the two-thirds rule is that a dark horse might step in and get the nomination when the people have expressed a preference for some one else.

TIME EXTENDED FOR BOATS TO EQUIP WITH LIFEBOATS

Captain Charles R. Tuckett, in charge of the custom house watchmen, whose duty it is to see that no pleasure boat carrying passengers shall be overcrowded, received a telegram today from the Bureau of Commerce and Labor that an extension of time had been granted all bay and inland passenger companies to equip boats with lifeboats. The time has been extended until July 31 for the boats to have 50 per cent of their lifeboat equipment ready, and September 1 for the other 50 per cent, of the equipment ready for service.

The harbor boats, which include all the steamers of the Nantasket line, will have lifeboats for 10 per cent of their passenger carrying capacity.

The bay boats, including the Nahant line, fishing steamers, Gloucester, Plymouth and Provincetown steamers, must have equipment for 50 per cent. of their carrying capacity.

Clark Declares: 'Bryan Aspersions False, Infamous'

BALTIMORE, July 1.—Speaker Clark, in a letter to Senator William J. Stone of Missouri declares "false and infamous" Mr. Bryan's implied accusations that the vote of the New York delegation placed him under obligations to J. Pierpont Morgan, August Belmont and Thomas F. Ryan.

Speaker Clark's letter is in reply to one from Senator Stone, pledging Mr. Clark continued support and urging him to remain a candidate before the convention until a nomination was made.

Speaker Clark's letter follows:

Replying to the communication of my supporters forwarded to me by you, I beg to say that, in extraordinary circumstances, I would be the last to encourage any movement which might tend to create deadlock in a Democratic national convention, and thereby, perhaps, imperil the standing of our party in the estimation of the country.

I believe that I am speaking the exact truth when I say that no personal interest would weigh with me for one moment as against my lifelong devotion to our party.

If a majority of the delegates had not declared their preference for me as their candidate, I could not entertain your proposal. The fact, however, that they have done so on eight successive ballots creates an exceptional condition which surely merits careful and conscientious consideration.

It is undoubtedly true that the custom of our party was violated when the Democratic national convention, assembled at the instigation of Mr. Bryan, who successfully solicited the co-operation of others in an effort to prevent such ratification.

Mr. Bryan set forth his reasons for pursuing this course in his speech, explaining his own change of vote. He declared that I was a candidate at the primaries of Nebraska as a progressive, and that upon this understanding, he was elected a delegate and instructed to vote for me in the Baltimore convention.

This is correct. I was regarded then and had been regarded for years as a progressive by the Democrats of Nebraska and by Mr. Bryan. What has since transpired to convince Mr. Bryan that, though in his judgment a progressive only two months ago, and even only one week ago, I am not a progressive now?

Have I suddenly proved faithless to the principles which I have upheld steadfastly for twenty years? No. Have I been recreant to my trust as Speaker of the House of Representatives? No. Mr. Bryan cites no act of mine in evidence of his assumption. He withholds his vote from me because he will not participate in the nomination of any man whose nomination depends upon the vote of the New York delegation.

Mr. Clark quotes at length from the statements which Mr. Bryan sent in the convention, and then continues:

Although Mr. Bryan's words are skewedly chosen to avoid making a direct charge upon me, the implication is plain. It is that if elected President of the United States I would consider myself "obligated" to those whom he declares to be "my friends" and would be under the "control of those influences."

It would be unbecoming in one holding my present official position to express the indignation which I feel at these veiled aspersions upon my character. My integrity has been established by a lifetime of public service that needs no defense. The simple reason that never once during the seventeen years I have served in Congress have I been subjected to the test of temptation through wrongful influence in any form.

But whether I shall become your designated candidate for President or not, I am your Speaker at a time when your party is in the crucible of scrutiny and I cannot in duty permit these aspersions to pass unheeded. As Speaker of the House of Representatives, as a life-long Democrat, proud of my party, as an American man, I denounce Mr. Bryan's implied accusations both false and infamous.

If I am speaking the truth with respect to this matter, it follows necessarily that the reasons advanced by Mr. Bryan for departing from the time-honored custom of our party in recognizing the vote of the majority are not reasons at all, but the shallowest of pretexts put forward to achieve some purpose which I shall not attempt to divine.

I bid you, then, say to my friends that I accept with deep gratitude their renewed assurance of loyalty, and now declare without qualification, that my name will remain before the convention, subject to no trade or dicker, until two-thirds of the delegates shall ratify or refuse to ratify the action of the majority.

Auto News

By J. C. KERRISON.

It is indeed refreshing to see the businesslike manner in which the present Contest Board of the American Automobile Association handles affairs. It interprets the rules with a fearlessness and equity that commands respect and support even from those who are unfortunate enough to suffer as a result if such decisions.

The recent Santa Monica race brought forth many complications and instead of penalizing cars that, with the approval of the Contest Board representatives, violated the spirit if not the letter of the law they hit at the root of the difficulty by suspending from all racing privileges the officials responsible for the misunderstanding, if such it can be called.

At the conclusion of the Santa Monica race it was unofficially stated that records had been created, but after due and calm deliberation the Contest Board has sent out an announcement to the effect that the Santa Monica road race and the Motordrome events were not sanctioned and are also official records for the reason that the Board has not yet been able to secure possession of the official printed ticket tape of the timing apparatus used to record the time in these events.

The fact that these records were not obtained by the board is, at least, indicative of a rather loose grip on the part of the officials at Santa Monica attended to their duties, and the Board showed its disposition to treat every one fairly when it suspended its official representative for the district in which the contest was held.

Lubrication is one of the problems of the motor car industry that is as high and that quality of the oil has much to do with the results of the wear and tear, says E. A. Schon, manager of the Charles E. Kellom Company, manufacturers of Invader Gear Oil.

"Invader Gear Oil will follow the gears and only necessitates filling the gear case occasionally to alter the gears to dip. After the gears have once been thoroughly coated the coating becomes almost indestructible, thereby eliminating noisy gears and reducing the wear and tear caused by friction. It will not foam nor heat and even when mounting air rust while remaining idle for any length of time. The oil possesses properties which make it invaluable as a lubricant for gears under hard conditions.

To have, for he very own, to do with as he likes, a good speedy, economical motor car is one of the ambitions of every mechanic. Nine times out of ten the expenditures which any dare-devil makes after winning a big purse at the track of the old fashioned grade for purchase of such a car.

That this is true will probably surprise the average spectator of races who usually pictures each of his heroes as a man at those dizzying speeds on the track, or at the factory he represents on the track, and the best of these troubles would be a car for his own personal use.

The fact is that in the cases point to an entirely different conclusion. The famous winner of the race, and Howard Wilcox, his teammate, who won the prize, have both bought Studebaker E-M-F "30" cars. Don Herr, chief driver for Benoist, bought a third Studebaker E-M-F "30." Ralph Endicott, winner of another big chunk of money, has a Studebaker Flanders "20."

SALEM POLICE GET $3,000 WORTH OF LIQUORS IN RAID

Three thousand dollars' worth of confiscated liquors, the most ever seized in a single day's raid in Salem, was the evidence against the alleged proprietors of nine raided places who were arraigned in court today.

Marshal Patrick J. Lehen arranged the raids. The stores visited were those of Roche & McNiff, No. 124 Boston street; John Kumminsky, No. 177 Bridge street; William F. Hennessy, No. 117 Bridge street; James F. Gallagher, No. 103½ Endicott street, "The Endicott Pharmacy"; J. S. Murray, No. 131 Essex street, "The Witch City Pharmacy"; Charles Stevens, No. 91 Derby street; Peter Griffin, No. 35½ Bridge street; William F. Hennessy estate, Dunkels and Derby street.

The biggest haul was from the Witch City Pharmacy, the police said, and here were discovered three cleverly arranged hidden storage places, one under a fancy woodwork wall, on which was hung an artistic picture. Pressing a button behind the picture swung round and showed a little closet.

EDITORIAL PAGE OF THE BOSTON AMERICAN BOSTON JULY 1, 1912 NEWS

Mr. Bryan Destroying the Opportunities of the Democratic Party for Success and Achievement.

BALTIMORE, July 1.—I came to this convention, not as a delegate, but as a Democrat. I came to give the Democratic party, and the Democratic candidate, the same loyal support that I gave the party and the candidate in 1896 and 1900.

In 1896 my newspapers were among the few independent newspapers in the country that supported Mr. Bryan and the Democratic cause. I devoted my papers to that cause. The advertisers told me that if I continued to support Mr. Bryan they would go out of my papers.

I told them the more advertisements that were taken out of the papers, the more space I would have in which to support Mr. Bryan.

The advertisers went out of the papers almost in a body. I had plenty of space then in which to support Mr. Bryan, and I devoted that space to the support of Mr. Bryan.

In 1900 Senator Jones, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, told me that the party had no organ in the Middle West, and, in response to his request I founded the Chicago American, on the Fourth of July, 1900, the day on which the Democratic convention assembled, and devoted my paper to the support of Mr. Bryan and the Democratic candidates.

I came to this convention in Baltimore to support Progressive principles and a Progressive Democrat, and to oppose the political bosses and the privileged interests, as I have always done, and always will do.

I came here to support the Democratic candidate, even though it were William Jennings Bryan, although I, and every other friend of Mr. Bryan, have come to know that he is never grateful for a service nor loyal to a friend.

I had no personal or selfish interest in this contest, and my preference for Mr. Clark was only because I believed that he had demonstrated the genuineness of his Progressive principles, not merely by empty professions, but by actual performances. I had refused to allow my friends in my own State to name me as their candidate for the nomination, and I was determined to sacrifice every selfish ambition or personal interest to secure a platform of Progressive principles, carried to success by a united Democratic party.

The spirit which I felt seemed to me to be shared by nearly every Democrat that I met at this convention, and this convention opened with Democratic prospects brighter than I have ever seen them before.

From the moment, however, that Mr. Bryan injected his selfish ambitions and ruthless methods into this convention, Democratic prospects have diminished, until today I feel, and every reasoning human being must feel, that a nomination delivered to any Democratic candidate by this convention would be of but little value.

The convention of the Republican party in Chicago became odious in the eyes of the people of this country. But Democrats returning to their States will find that the Democratic Convention has become even more odious.

The candidate who went before the Republican Convention with the indorsement of the people, expressed in direct primaries, was denied the nomination. The people were defied and their demands disregarded.

But into this so-called Democratic Convention a candidate has come, with the greatest number of delegates, elected by the direct primaries, which express the people's will. If this convention is a Progressive convention, and if the watchword of the Progressives is "Let the People Rule," how can this convention afford to reject the candidate and deny to the people the right to rule?

In this convention this Democrat increased his strength until he received the votes of a majority of the delegates.

If this is a Democratic Convention, and if the motto of the Democracy is the rule of the majority, how can this convention refuse to nominate the man who received, for eight consecutive ballots, a majority of the States of the convention?

If the Democratic delegates fail to nominate Champ Clark they will not only arouse the resentment of the people of the Nation, but they will make their pretentions to Progressive principles ridiculous. It would seem as if it had been Mr. Bryan's deliberate intention to destroy the favorable prospects of the Democratic party and to prevent the victory for Progressive principles which seemed certain.

To accomplish this object, Mr. Bryan has stopped at nothing. He has not hesitated even to make unwarranted attacks upon the integrity of Champ Clark, a man who has been his devoted friend for over eighteen years.

Mr. Bryan objects to Champ Clark because he is a harmonizer.

Mr. Bryan forgets that there is a definite difference between a harmonizer and a compromiser. A compromiser is a man who sacrifices his principles in order to attain success. A harmonizer is a man who secures united support for his principles in order to carry them through to success.

Mr. Clark is a harmonizer, and by harmony he has secured success for Democracy and for Progressive principles in the House of Representatives.

Mr. Clark, by harmony, could secure success for the Democracy and for Progressive principles in this presidential campaign. Progressive principles can only be put into operation through political success. Champ Clark stands, and has always stood, for harmonious co-operation in support of Progressive principles. Mr. Bryan stands, and always has stood, for dissension and defeat.

Mr. Bryan denounces Champ Clark for being willing to receive the votes of New York State. Yet Mr. Bryan has always sought the votes of New York State in his own support.

Mr. Bryan declares his opposition to bosses. Yet Mr. Bryan's opposition has always been strictly limited to the bosses who opposed him. Whenever a boss supports Mr. Bryan, he becomes, by that act, so purified and sanctified as to be worthy of Mr. Bryan's approval and association.

In 1900 Tammany supported Mr. Bryan, and Mr. Bryan accepted that support and gratefully acknowledged it. All the newspapers printed Mr. Bryan's remarks praising Tammany Hall, in which he said:

"Great is Tammany, and Croker is its prophet."

In 1904 Mr. Bryan was not a candidate, therefore he denounced Mr. Roger Sullivan upon the floor of the St. Louis Convention as a "train robber."

In 1908 Mr. Bryan was a candidate, and he went through that campaign arm in arm with Mr. Sullivan, and hand in hand with Mr. Murphy.

If Mr. Sullivan was a train robber, as Mr. Bryan has said, then Mr. Bryan was no less than accessory before the fact, and a willing receiver of the stolen goods.

As a matter of fact, Mr. Murphy is a boss, and Mr. Sullivan is a boss, and Mr. Taggart is a boss, and, as a matter of further fact, Mr. Bryan is a boss, as insolent and arrogant as any boss could possibly be, as indifferent to the will of the people, when it runs contrary to his will, and as defiant of popular demands when they do not coincide with his own desires.

Mr. Bryan, the exponent of the principles of popular primaries, repudiates the popular preference of his own State.

He has destroyed the opportunities of the Democracy for success and achievement. He has sacrificed his friends and stultified himself and his principles, in order to gratify a mean jealousy and reap a petty revenge.

If he is to be the leader of the Democracy, there will soon be no Democracy left to follow him.

A man without conscience or character will soon become a man without friends or followers. The only misfortune is that in ruining himself he is bringing wreck and ruin upon the Democracy as well.

Andress Floyd's Self-Mastery Colony

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1912, by American-Journal-Examiner

A CERTAIN woman once won a few precious jewels prizes one above the others because it has a special meaning.

It is an old Spanish coat of arms, and represents self-conquest.

A chanticleer in emerald, enamel and mother of pearl is gripping a serpent in his claws, and lifting his ruby colored head ready to crow with exultation.

Self-conquest is so much greater than conquest of circumstances, power, place, glory or fame.

Some of the worst people of earth have conquered all these things.

Only really GREAT souls have achieved Self-Conquest.

In New Jersey there is a man named Andress Floyd.

He has achieved Self-Mastery, to the extent that he cares now for nothing on earth save to be helpful to other men and to aid them to this same achievement.

Mr. Floyd and his wife have named their place the Self-Mastery Colony, but some people call it "Hobo Farm."

Mr. Floyd has known success, money success, position and popularity with the gay world.

Then he knew failure, and that put him in touch with every other failure on earth.

Only Necessary That He Knows That a Man Is a Failure

Now, the only letter of introduction which is needed to his Self-Mastery Colony and to work and friendship is the knowledge that a man is a failure, homeless and friendless.

Then he is admitted and given the hand of friendship and some task is set for him to do.

His idea is that men who have lost the work habit must be attracted back, not driven, and, unlike the business man who asks for all sorts of references when an applicant comes for work, Mr. Floyd asks nothing and gives much.

Here is a little classification which has been given by the founder of this colony of the type of men who come to him.

How He Classifies the Types of Men That Come to Him

"Young men who are drifting and homeless come to us from the charity associations, missions, clergymen, Y. M. C. A. and interested friends, and may be classified as follows:

"First—The man unable to find immediate employment.

"Second—The man in middle life who has lost his business.

"Third—The intemperate man trying to control himself.

"Fourth—The country boy stranded in the city.

"Fifth—The rich man's son, wayward, estranged from his family.

"Sixth—The man discouraged through domestic troubles.

"Seventh—Men run down physically and mentally, needing outdoor work.

"Who are the 'guests' at the Self-Mastery Colony? Men of education and refinement, who have failed in business and cannot get a job; men driven to the gutter by liquor or cocaine or morphine; men rendered desperate and despondent by domestic infelicity; men from whose characters have dribbled the last grains of sand, the last atom of pluck."

These men are given many tasks to do and after they once learn the road back to labor through this pleasant path, they either stay as helpers and coworkers, or go forth to take their place among the world's toilers again.

He has issued a call to all philanthropic people who long to be of assistance to humanity. Here it is:

"Your heart goes out in sympathy to the broken man, who, though the fault is his own, has become a social outcast. It is with the keenest regret that you turn him from your door, knowing that he is likely to fall into deeper and deeper desperation, until even health, liberty and self respect are lost in him. At best, all that you can give him is temporary assistance—food and money—when his real need is a higher and better viewpoint of life.

"For years I have been convinced that to give this so-called derelict food and shelter was not enough, for under this man's forbidding exterior I find there dwells some one's son, brother or father, who has lost—that which he can least afford to lose—his ideals.

Opens His Door When All Other Doors Are Locked

"Firmly held by this conviction, I started to open my doors day and night to this friendless man, who in his hour of discouragement mutters to himself that all men have turned from him; that all doors are locked against him; that there can be no God; that the world's ideals are dead.

"Then it is that I would have him know of the Self-Mastery Colony, where the aim is toward the ideal—the ideal of human service—where no doors are locked against him, where no man turns from him, and that after all there really is a GOD whose CHRIST calls out to the good that lives within his own erring heart—calls to him to reclaim himself."

The Recall as a Parallel to Divorce

Written for the American by Dr. C. H. Parkhurst

DIVORCE is in essential particulars similar to what is known in politics as the "recall," and the two can properly enough be considered as illustrating each other.

Marriage and election are both of them to some extent a leap in the dark.

A man never knows the woman he marries till after he has married her and the courting days are over.

Neither does a voter know his candidate till after the canvass is completed, the polls have been closed and the elect has gone about discharging the duties for which he was chosen.

The two kinds of courtship, therefore—the political and the matrimonial—require to be conducted as studiously and thoroughly as may be, that the unknown elements in each of the two varieties of candidacy may be reduced to a minimum, and disappointment obviated if possible.

It is unfortunate on the whole that such a thing as divorce is possible, for while the prohibition of it would in particular cases work hardship and injustice, the harms made possible by divorce are in general severer than those that result from strict monogamy—one man and one wife apiece.

One resulting harm is that it converts courtship into very much of an amusement and reduces it to the low grade of a matrimonial experiment, the lover—that is to say the man who imagines himself a lover—relieving himself, in view of the uncertainties of the ultimate outcome, by the reflection that if the first wife proves disappointing he has learned enough by his first trial to make a following experiment more probably successful.

The "recall" in politics is all the way through the exact parallel of this.

It renders an electoral canvass merely an experiment, and because felt to be an experiment, and to be an experiment that can easily enough be tried over again, if the first one fails, is dealt with only semi-seriously and with no anxious concern as to whether it turns out well or ill.

It converts into play the most serious of all civic functions, and in proportion as the office to be filled is more critical and responsible—like a position upon the bench, for example—the greater the indignity and the graver the belittlement that is practised.

If one will read the sixth plank of the Rochester platform, and in every case when the word recall occurs will substitute divorce (along with one or two minor changes), it will be found how nearly alike the two vices are and how closely resembling each other are the results of the two vices; also how earnest and critical a truth it is that in both domestic and civic matters "the fundamental consideration is that candidates shall be soberly elected rather than carelessly elected and then cashiered."

C. H. Parkhurst
